JOHN B. MORAN'S PLEDGE AS TO MURDER DENS

When elected District Attorney I will see to it that not only the police officials, but the Police Board itself, perform their duties in relation to the investigation of and blotting out of these places of crime (suit case murder dens). Neither the wealth nor social standing of the persons involved will deter me from instituting and prosecuting with diligence and severity this class of crime.

If the police and the Board of Police neglect to perform their duties as I understand them under the law, I will see to it that hey are no only removed, but that the criminal law is administered to them for the neglect to perform their sworn duties.—Candidate for District Attorney John B. Moran in the BOSTON MERICAN, November 2, 1905.

WOMAN

SUSPECT IN SUIT CASE CRIME

POLICE HEAR IS CAUGHT

Halifax Reports That Person Believed to Be Mrs. Mary Dean, the Nurse Who Was Present at Susie Geary's Death, Is Under Surveillance There.

Information to the effect that Mrs. Mary Dean, the woman who was connected with the death of Miss Susan Agnes Geary, and who attended her up to the time of her death in her house, has been definitely located at Halifax, N. S., and that she is now under police surveillance, was received to-day at the Boston headquarters.

Now that John B. Moran has been elected District Attorney of Suffolk County and has pledged himself that he will sweep from the city all such infamous places as that in which the young dancer received the treatment that resulted in her death, the police have begun an active and searching investigation with a view to anticipate the proposed action of the District Attorney-elect in this particular.

MORAN RENEWS HIS PROMISE.

On the stump Mr. Moran declared emphatically that when he was elected he would blot all such places from the map of the city. To-day, in connection with that promise, he said:

"I will do, in office, exactly what I, on the platform, pledged myself to do."

Following the order of the Board of Commissioners, Commissioner William H. H. Emmons will to-day confer with Dr. Edward B. Harvey, secretary of the State Board of Registration and Medicine, Inspector Snow of the Postoffice Department and Deputy Chief George E. Neal of the State Police as to the most effective way to proceed against the illegal places.

The work of obtaining the evidence will be intrusted to Superintendent William H. Pierce and Chief of Detectives William B. Watts. Their work will be done as quietly as possible. It is the intention of the Police Commissioners, they say, to make the investigation a thoroughly right one, and to stamp out the evil that exists along those lines in Boston.

HALIFAX POLICE TO WATCH HER.

In response to the telegraphed information received at police headquarters to-day that the Halifax police had, they thought, Mrs. Dean under surveillance, the police of Boston sent them word to keep in touch with the woman until it was definitely ascertained whether or not she is the woman wanted to clear up the dress suit crime.

More minute particulars as to the appearance of the woman were forwarded to the Halifax authorities who seem to be confident that they have the woman who nursed the dancing girl, and was with her at her death.

Record of Her Marriage.

The real name of the woman for whom the police have been searching is Mary S. Gilfether. Her maiden name was Mary S. Dean. She is thirty-seven years of age, a native of Boston, and has always lived in this city.

Two years she lived in South Boston, and there it was that she married Dr. Frank E. Gilfether, a resident of that district, Dec. 14, 1898. The day following the marriage Dr. Gilfether left for the Philippines and has not been seen since.

Dr. Gilfether lived with his uncle in South Boston, his father and mother being dead. He had no brothers or sisters, and his uncle educated him. He went to the Harvard Medical School, and about ten years ago opened an office on Dudley street, Roxbury, practicing later in South Boston. His uncle left him considerable money.

The records of the city registrar contain the following relating to the marriage of Dr. Gilfether and the woman who is now sought for by the police:

"Married, December 14, 1898, Frank E. Gilfether of 140 West Sixth street, South Boston, age thirty-five, occupation physician, birthplace Boston, son of James Gilfether and Sylvia Macomber—first marriage. Mary S. O'Brien, maiden name Dean, of 891 East Broadway, South Boston, age thirty, occupation hairdresser, born in Boston, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth Dean—second marriage, widow."

During her residence in South Boston Mrs. Gilfether lived with her parents. The family consisted of the father and mother, two daughters, Mary S. and Sarah, and two sons, Edwin H. Dean and James P. Dean, the latter now connected with the fire department. The family was held in the highest esteem in the peninsular district.

Mrs. Gilfether, who was then Mrs. O'Brien, made very few acquaintances, and there are few people in South Boston today who remember her. She was then engaged as a hairdresser and manicurist in an office in the Colonial building, and spent most of her time between her office and her home.

May 8, 1899, Mrs. Elizabeth Dean, mother of the present Mrs. Gilfether, died and was buried from the Gate of Heaven Church. Shortly afterward Mr. Dean, with his sons and daughters, removed to Roxbury. Edward H. Dean, the eldest son, was a sufferer from tuberculosis, and phy-

HEARST WILL FIGHT TAMMANY'S ATTEMPT TO STEAL MAYORALTY

Gigantic Frauds Perpetrated, and Aid of Courts Has Been Invoked.

Hearst Cheated by Most Brazen Fraud, Says Coler

Mr. Hearst has been elected by 10,000 votes. He has been cheated by the tremendous frauds of Tammany Hall. There is no doubt whatever of his election. I shall work night and day to see that justice is done.

The people of New York have elected him Mayor, and it has only been by the most outrageous, brazen and rotten fraud that I ever heard of that Tammany is trying to keep the high office away from him.

We shall insist on an official count that will tell the story.—Statement of Bird Coler, president-elect of the borough of Brooklyn.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Evidence which came piling into the headquarters of the Municipal Ownership League to-day all went to show the enormous and outrageous frauds perpetrated throughout Greater New York by Murphy and his men to aid in the re-election of McClellan.

Bird S. Coler, elected president of the borough of Brooklyn on the Municipal Ownership ticket, said to-day that at least 5,000 fraudulent votes had been cast for McClellan in Brooklyn, and that affidavits were being prepared upon which arrests would be asked for.

The most favorable claim that Murphy to-day makes for McClellan is a plurality of 3,485, with twenty-six districts still held back and not counted, by Murphy's order.

Two years ago McClellan had a majority of 62,684.

THE VOTE FOR MAYOR.

Here is the vote for Mayor:

Borough.	Ivins, Rep.	McClellan, Dem.	Hearst, Ind.
Manhattan and Bronx	64,088	140,682	123,920
Brooklyn	61,095	68,655	84,631
Queens	7,365	13,193	13,677
Richmond	4,501	6,121	2,966
Total	137,049	228,651	225,193

The official count of the ballots yet to be made by the board of county canvassers will show that a large plurality of the votes cast for Mayor were cast for William R. Hearst, his managers declared to-day.

Mr. Hearst announced to-day that he would fight the battle to the end in order that men who cast their votes for him should not be defrauded, and the will of the citizens of New York city thwarted. Every legal precaution will be taken to insure a fair and accurate count by the board of canvassers. The ablest legal talent in the city will watch the count and will demand and insist that it be honest and thorough.

EVIDENCE OF FRAUD.

In Manhattan the evidence in the possession of the Municipal Ownership League shows that bribery was openly practiced at the polls, colonies of floaters were voted and every trick and dishonest device at the command of Tammany Hall was resorted to in the effort to minimize the Hearst vote and scrape together a plurality for McClellan. Conditions were the same in Brooklyn.

On Bird S. Coler's statement, an honest count in Brooklyn will alone overturn the seeming plurality of McClellan, as claimed by Murphy, and give Hearst a clean victory.

"I believe that Hearst is elected," Coler says. "Great frauds have been discovered in the Second Assembly District, and are evident also throughout Brooklyn. Affidavits are being prepared now, and those who are guilty will be arrested and arraigned in the police courts to-day."

MURPHY'S FIGURES PROOF.

The figures themselves, as given out by Murphy's lieutenants, are sufficient evidence of fraud. Two years ago McClellan had a majority of the total votes cast in New York of 62,684. His total vote two

UTTER RE-ELECTED IN RHODE ISLAND; SIX PRECINCTS MISSING

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 8.—With all 157 election districts, except six, heard from, Governor George H. Utter, Republican, is re-elected by a vote of 30,217. His chief opponent, ex-Governor Lucius F. C. Garvin, Democrat, has 25,305, giving Utter a lead of 4,913. Other candidates' votes are: Vermont Helme, Prohibition, 793; Carpenter, Socialist, 443; Herrick, Socialist Labor, 350.

The State Senate will have thirty-three Republicans and four Democrats, with one tie in Smithfield not yet decided. The House will be Republicans 61, Democrats 11.

The proposition for a bond issue for State roads and to complete the State armory in this city was defeated. The Republican amendment to the State constitution, raising the membership of the House to 100, giving at least one representative to every town and limiting this city to twenty-five, was defeated.

Ex-Governor Utter says: "I am not disturbed. We have made our fight against the proposed constitutional amendment and the people have defeated it. The fight for reform and a constitutional convention will be continued with renewed vigor."

REQUEST RECOUNT OF WHITNEY-DRAPER VOTE

CLOSENESS OF CONTEST MAKES IT NECESSARY, SAYS DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

A recount of the vote for Lieutenant-Governor will be asked for by the Democrats, through the Democratic State Committee. Candidate Henry M. Whitney and the committee believe that the closeness of the vote demands it. This was decided upon this forenoon by the State Committee, through acting Chairman Arthur Lyman of Brookline.

The press return vote of the State was as follows:

Draper, R.	182,197
Whitney, D.	180,201
Draper's plurality	1,996

Revised Vote of the State

Guild, R.	197,512
Bartlett, D.	174,396
Guild's plurality, 23,116.
Draper, R.	182,197
Whitney, D.	180,201
Draper's plurality, 1,996.

TAMMANY THUGS ADD VIOLENCE AND CRIME TO FRAUD

Hirelings of the Tiger, Under Direction of Murphy's Lieutenants, Use Clubs on Hearst and Jerome Men—Holding Back of Counts Precipitates Crisis in New York.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The New York World to-day says:

Men battered and bruised were helped by friends into the Municipal Ownership headquarters during the night. One man had a broken arm dangling in his sleeve. Another's head had been cut open and the blood was trickling through his bandages. Tammany thugs in the lower East Side districts had all but killed them.

John Palmieri, candidate for judge of the Court of Special Sessions on the Municipal Ownership ticket, is in a hospital severaly injured as the result of an attack upon him at the polls. He escaped a bullet fired at him, only to be set upon and beaten.

Joseph Cody, candidate for sheriff, was saved only by his own great strength and ability to fight the crowd that set upon him.

McKane Pales in Comparison.

From many parts of Manhattan reports poured in of the greatest violence and crimes at the polls that New York has ever known.

The acts of John Y. McKane in his strongest days in Gravesend were declared to be mild compared to the deeds committed yesterday in the Tammany districts led by Thomas Foley, "Big Tim" Sullivan, "Little Tim" Sullivan, John F. Oakley and Charles F. Murphy.

Murphy refrained from appearing in person during these attacks, but Oakley, Commissioner of Water, Gas and Electricity, led his own band through the Fourteenth Assembly District, and with clubs and fists beat the Hearst and Jerome men without mercy.

At midnight, Mr. Hearst, surrounded by aides summoned from every part of the city, was marshalling his forces for a prompt and legal fight upon Tammany.

Returns Held Back.

Lawyers were summoned by the score to take the affidavits of the bruised and battered men coming in from the battle ground.

Some of them had been sent to the Tammany strongholds, where the returns were held back, to see that a fair count was had. Superintendent Morgan's deputies were gathered in wherever they could be reached. Special deputies were sworn in and sent in cabs and automobiles to prevent further frauds.

Personal Triumph for Mr. Hearst, Says Times

The election cannot fairly be regarded as otherwise than a great personal triumph for Mr. Hearst, considering the fact that his fight was made practically without an organization behind him. He carried Brooklyn by over 15,000 plurality, and Queens by a plurality of several hundred.—From New York Times this morning.

TAMMANY TRIES TO STEAL ELECTION

years ago was 314,782, and Murphy's own returns show a falling off in this vote of 86,378.

In the borough of Queens, which Hearst carried, Joseph Bermel, the Municipal Ownership candidate for borough president, defeated Joe Cassidy, the notorious boss of that borough. Bermel won by a majority of 5,986 votes. Bermel received 18,651 votes and Cassidy, in spite of the tremendous fight he made for re-election, with Tammany's backing, received only 12,665 votes.

The entire Municipal Ownership ticket was swept to victory in Brooklyn. W. R. Hearst's plurality in the borough was 15,505. John Ford, Municipal Ownership candidate for Comptroller, received a plurality of 10,856, and James G. Phelps Stokes, candidate for president of the Board of Aldermen, was given a plurality of 11,351.

"LOCK UP RETURNS"—JEROME.

The Sixth District is "Big" Tim Sullivan's, and the Eighteenth is Charles F. Murphy's. Jerome and Mr. Hearst had a half-hour conference over the telephone early to-day, and certain information which was given Mr. Jerome caused him to instantly give this order: "Take the returns from the Eighteenth and Sixth Assembly Districts and lock them up. Guard them carefully. They may cut a big figure in this count. I propose to see that there is a fair count in this mayoralty contest, no matter who it hurts."

It will probably be late in December before the Board of Aldermen will be able to complete the count which will be taken to court for final adjudication.

Many bettors decline to pay off until the decision of the court.

The official count by the board will be watched closely by the ablest legal talent in this city, and every known form of the law that will provide an honest count will be demanded and insisted upon.

Returns were held in Murphy's and Sullivan's districts (the Eighteenth and Sixth), in order that they could be doctored to make the number necessary to elect McClellan. It was not until District Attorney Jerome, by threats of criminal action, demanded five ballot boxes be sent to police headquarters that the returns were produced.

The count, although not finished at police headquarters, has been abandoned there, at least temporarily. Up to the hour early to-day when the clerks stopped tabulating returns, there were still twenty-six election districts missing, but no attempt was made to count those votes or to indicate what districts they were.

The utmost confusion existed at police headquarters throughout the night in registering the vote, and this morning the task was given up with something that strongly resembled despair.

At 9 o'clock to-day there was no one in charge of the count at police headquarters, and there were actually no official returns at that hour. When the count would be resumed was a matter of speculation.

9,000 JEROME PLURALITY.

Jerome's election is claimed for him by a plurality of about 9,000. With some districts missing his total vote seems to be about 110,000. Osborne's total vote with some districts missing is about 101,000. Shearn's vote with some districts missing is about [illegible].

No explanation has yet been vouchsafed of an early morning conference between Police Commissioner McAdoo and John J. O'Brien, Mayor McClellan's campaign manager. This conference lasted from 1 until 4 o'clock this morning and was held in the commissioner's inner office.

Mr. O'Brien entered headquarters through a rear entrance and his presence was unknown for a long time. What the conference was about the police commissioner refused to explain. As he was leaving after it was over he called up on his own telephone a number of precincts. What orders he gave or what information he asked was not made known.

"LET IN LIGHT OF DAY."

The New York Press to-day, in telling of fraud and intimidation by Tammany thugs, declares:

"We do not believe that McClellan was elected. We believe that he was short of election by thousands of votes. The Municipal Ownership League, which has polled more HONEST votes, as everyone will concede, than George B. McClellan, owes it to its principles and to the public of this city to contest the election of McClellan in the courts.

"Let the votes be examined in the light of day.

"Let the crooked work, where the Murphy money was spent in barrels, be revealed.

"Let the dishonest votes of the corrupt districts where McClellan polled more votes by last night's count than in normal years be thrown out.

"Then see who won the mayoralty election of yesterday."

Says the New York World to-day:

"On every side was heard the cry of fraud, and on every side there was evidence of the methods that had been resorted to by Tammany to batter down the vote of Hearst and Jerome. Workers for Hearst and Jerome were beaten all over the East Side.

ATTACK JEROME MEN.

"While the count was on and before the polls closed, men were telephoning to Hearst and Jerome headquarters that Tammany thugs were assaulting Jerome workers on every side. One man with a broken arm reached the Hearst headquarters and displayed his injury and said Tammany was stealing the district and when he protested he was nearly killed.

"It was charged that gangs of repeaters had gone through the city and cast thousands of votes in spite of the precautions taken to prevent fraud."

Herman A. Metz, for comptroller, and Patrick F. McGowan ran considerably ahead of McClellan. Metz made a very good run in Brooklyn. Coler won by 15,000.

Ahearn is re-elected in Manhattan, Haffen in the Bronx, Cromwell in Richmond, and Bermel is elected in Queens. Cassidy is badly defeated in the latter borough.

There is no doubt that Mr. Hearst's actual plurality was more than 50,000 and Murphy, in disposing of these votes, spent $1,000,000 and resorted to criminal methods the like of which have never before been witnessed in any city in this country.

Mr. Hearst announces that he will fight for the rights of those who supported him to the end and take whatever steps are necessary to see that the actual returns are made public.

Never before has there been known such widespread and utterly reckless resort to bribery, intimidation and the other corrupt practices in which Tammany Hall has become adept, and when all else had failed and it was known that nothing had availed to break the forces of the Hearst sentiment, the Murphy leaders deliberately held back reports from hundreds of East Side election districts in order that the returns might be so manipulated as to furnish the votes still lacking by McClellan.

Tammany Holds Up Return.

At 8:30 last night there came a sudden lull in the receipt of bulletins. Crowds standing in front of the many screens on which the returns were being flashed noticed that bulletins no longer were being received. For more than an hour Tammany did not permit the returns from a single district to be given out, and in that time the dirtiest work ever known in an election was being done by Murphy's henchmen on the East Side.

Out of the districts held back the vote lacked by McClellan was being made up. It was estimated that up to this time it had been clearly shown that 50,000 votes had been bought and stolen for Tammany and an enormous number of Hearst ballots destroyed.

Suffrage Openly Defeated.

Notwithstanding this wholesale political debauchery, it still was to be seen that Murphy needed thousands of votes to elect his candidate, and then, in the late hours of the night, after the voting had been done and the ballots all counted, the leaders of Tammany on the East Side flaunted their defiance of the will of the people as expressed by their votes, as well as their contempt for any appearance of decency, by so manipulating the ballots in their possession as to bolster up their pretensions to a victory.

Beside this act, following a day of bribery and intimidation, the disgrace of Philadelphia faded into insignificance. Nothing that ever had been done in that city in the worst days of the political ring that dominated it for years could be compared with this carefully planned municipal criminality.

Political Crimes Unparalleled.

In Philadelphia the people, outraged by villainies of lesser sort, marched through the streets with hempen nooses, crying aloud their determination to punish the political miscreants who had betrayed them. Nothing they felt called upon to condemn approached in character the crimes committed in New York yesterday by Murphy in his futile attempt to continue his reign as the municipal representative of the allied trusts.

Every trick of bribery and corruption ever practiced in an election was put to use in thousands of cases yesterday by the henchmen of Charles F. Murphy in the attempt to defeat the election of William Randolph Hearst, and where votes could not be bought or stolen East Side bands were sent about under capable leaders with instructions to attack Municipal Ownership voters and watchers.

Tammany Spends Million.

The amount of money spent yesterday in Manhattan and the Bronx only can be estimated, but was boastfully proclaimed by a Tammany worker yesterday to be nearer a million than a half million dollars. It is known that more than $300,000 had been distributed the night before, and all this was being lavishly spent early in the day.

On the East Side the prevailing price for votes was from $3 to $5, but in many cases, in close districts, or in districts where for some reason the leader wished a particularly good showing, as much as $10 was paid. Where a voter would not promise to vote for McClellan for money he was offered money to remain away from the booth.

In other cases voters who were known to be Hearst workers were beaten at the polls and not permitted to cast their ballots. In still other cases Municipal Ownership watchers and challengers were intimidated and forced to leave the booths or were attacked by the gangs hired by the day for that purpose.

Never before in the history of New York were these methods put into use in a manner so openly shameless. The desperation of the Tammany leaders forced them to take any chance that offered, and the prospect of long terms behind bars failed to deter them.

WE HAVE WON DESPITE TAMMANY FRAUD, SAYS HEARST

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Mr. Hearst, at his home early this morning, gave out the following statement:

We have won the election. All of Tammany's fraud, all of Tammany's corruption, all of Tammany's violence and intimidation, all of Tammany's false registration, illegal voting and dishonest counting have not been able to overcome a great popular majority. I shall fight the battle to the end in behalf of the people who cast their votes for me and who shall not be disfranchised by criminal bosses.

WAS M'CLELLAN ELECTED?

(Editorial from New York Press, Republican.)

This paper has no idea that George B. McClellan was elected Mayor of New York yesterday.

The returns that are shown for him give him a scant few thousand, which, in any event, would be contestable. But see how and where he got many times the few thousand that his managers claim is his plurality. In shady districts the count, as returned last night, showed BIGGER VOTES FOR M'CLELLAN THAN WHEN THE TAMMANY PARTY WAS UNDIVIDED.

And this at a time when everywhere in the city the McClellan ticket was being slashed to ribbons!

It is impossible that McClellan could have exceeded his normal vote in some of the districts of this city at a time when he was LOSING MORE THAN HALF the Tammany vote throughout the length and breadth of New York.

We do not believe that McClellan was elected. We believe that he was short of election by thousands of votes. The Municipal Ownership League, which has polled more HONEST votes, as everyone will concede, than George B. McClellan, owes it to its principles and to the public of this city to contest the election of McClellan in the courts.

Let the votes be examined in the light of day. Let the crooked work, where the Murphy money was spent in barrels, be revealed. Let the dishonest votes of the corrupt districts where McClellan polled more votes—by last night's count than in normal years be thrown out.

Then see who won the mayoralty election of yesterday.

sicians advised his removal from the salt water further into the city. That was the reason for their removal to Roxbury.

MORAN DEFENDS LAST CASE FOR TWO YEARS

John B. Moran, Attorney-elect of Suffolk County, defended to-day his last case for two years to come.

In the little court room of the Dorchester District Court on Arcadia street he represented his last client before going to the Suffolk County Attorney's office to be the legal representative of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in accordance with the will of the Suffolk electorate.

He was there as counsel for Jacob Lewis, formerly conductor on the Elevated. On Mr. Moran's advice Lewis withdrew the plea of not guilty he had made two weeks ago and to-day pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny of forty-three nickels from the Elevated. He was fined $25 by Judge Churchill and paid the fine.

Mr. Moran rode out to Field's Corner in a trolley and walked briskly up Arcadia street to the court house. A group of young fellows outside spied him and one said:

"How do you do, District Attorney?"

After the case was settled Mr. Moran went into Clerk Merritt's office. Clerk Merritt came in, followed by Police Captain "Charley" Hunt of station 11.

"Hello, John," said Clerk Merritt, "I see you are District Attorney now."

"Yes," said Mr. Moran.

Clerk Merritt gave congratulations, Captain Hunt followed, and the three settled down for a moment to talk over old times.

Captain Hunt was formerly a sergeant at Station 9 in Moran's younger days. That was when Station 8 cases were tried at the old court house on Roxbury street under the late Judge Peter Wheelock.

"Do you remember, John," said Captain Hunt, "when you used to come into Judge Wheelock's court and get in arguments with him and he'd say, 'Sit down, Moran, sit down,' and you'd have to sit down"?

"This is the last case," said Mr. Moran, "that I shall defend for two years."

NEBRASKA AGAIN IS REPUBLICAN

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 8.—Nebraska is still in the Republican column. Estimates based on scattered returns from all parts of the state indicate the election of Letton, Republican, over Hastings, Fusion, by 12,000 majority, a Republican gain of 4,000 compared with two years ago.

VIRGINIA ELECTS SWANSON BY 20,000

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 8.—Claude A. Swanson, Democrat, was yesterday elected Governor of Virginia by about 20,000 plurality over Judge L. L. Lewis, Republican. The negroes throughout the state abstained from voting almost entirely. The Republicans gained a few members of the Legislature.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

WEAVER AND REFORM SWEEP PHILADELPHIA

CITY PARTY TICKET WINS BY 75,000 MAJORITY OVER REPUBLICAN.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—The City Party's reform candidates have overwhelmed the Republican organization ticket. The official figures give a majority of 75,000.

The most bitter political battle in the city's history has been fought. It has been marked by innumerable free fights resulting in riot calls to the police, many attempts to cast fraudulent votes, and last night the list of arrests made at the polls total close to 500.

But, for the first time in the history of the political living Philadelphian, a reform ticket has won over the organization triumphed in a way that surprised even Philadelphia itself and the city can hardly hold itself for joy. After the results became known Mayor Weaver, who had led the battle for reform forces, threw open his reception room at city hall and thousands of citizens trooped in to shake his hand and exchange congratulations.

Wins Complete Victory.

The City Party, although it gave predictions of an enthusiastic character, did not confidently believe that the whole ticket would pull through. It was elected in its entirety, however. The successful men were:

Sheriff, Wilson N. Brown; coroner, J. M. R. Jermon; county commissioners, Rudolph Blankenburg and E. A. Anderson. Only one man on the Republican ticket will hold office. Under the law covering the election of three county commissioners one must represent the minority party. William A. Ensley will get that post.

Penrose Loses His Own Ward.

When the count was taken many surprises came to light. Not the least interesting feature was the fact that United States Senator Penrose, the head of the State Republican organization, lost his own ward, the Eighth. This has been an organization stronghold of the most pronounced type. No one ever dreamed that it would go against the organization. The figures show that Brown, the City Party candidate for Sheriff, beat Neff, the Republican candidate by 150 votes. Plummer, the candidate on the Republican ticket, carried it over Berry by a very slim majority.

Democrats Get State by 90,000.

There is no doubt that William H. Berry, the reform Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, has swept the State, and his plurality will fall little short of 90,000. This alone upsets the traditions of years, and will put some State politicians who have dabbled with the Commonwealth's funds in a most uncomfortable position, it is predicted.

In the city the Republicans carried only fifteen wards out of a total of forty-two, and these by greatly reduced majorities.

State Senators McNichol of the Tenth, Vare of the First, Leader Durham of the Eighth and Leader Hugh Black of the Twenty-sixth were the only men prominent in the party councils to carry their bailiwicks, and even they have little to crow over.

David Martin, one-time city leader, boss of the Nineteenth Ward from time immemorial and present insurance commissioner, went down to ignominious defeat in his ward, as did also David H. Lane, the Republican veteran, in the Twentieth. Harbor Master Samuel Maloney in the Fifth, and a host of others who had previously been considered as invincible in their respective wards.

JEROME TO PROBE TAMMANY FRAUDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—District-Attorney Jerome was made cognizant of the glaring frauds perpetrated by Murphy's men. He said to-day:

"I shall be at my office at 2 o'clock this afternoon and will immediately institute an investigation of the frauds perpetrated by Tammany at the polls yesterday."

2 FAMILIES IN PERIL OF FIRE

The lives of members of two Malden families were imperilled by smoke and fire early to-day. They rushed through the hall and stairways to the street in their night clothes.

The house is a two and one-half story building and owned by H. E. Perkins. He and his family occupy the first floor. It was about 4 o'clock when he was aroused by smoke. He ran upstairs and aroused the family of W. D. Desmond. Everybody in the house fled for life. The property damage is estimated at $500.

DEMOCRATS WIN ON "MORALITY" TICKET

EVANSVILLE, Nov. 8.—The Democrats have swept the city. John W. Boehne, Democrat, was chosen Mayor and pulled the entire ticket through. Boehne's plurality will be between 2,000 and 3,000. The issue was on morality.

SERUM FOR STATE'S LEPERS

Hoping to cure the five lepers in Massachusetts of their dread disease, Dr. Louis Edmonds of Harwich will soon begin treatment with "leprolin," a serum discovered by an English army officer, and used with much success in India, at the new State leprosy camp on Penikese Island.

FINES BUSINESS MEN FOR AUTO SPEEDING

Nine Boston business men, residing in Weston, were fined in the Waltham District Court to-day, charged with speeding their automobiles. The men and their fines were: John A. Smith, $10; W. A. Park, $10; J. H. Wheeler, $20; Charles M. Slogan, $10; Eben B. Jordon, $10; Nathan Anthony, $15; J. E. Hathaway, $10; James H. Erenhan, $10, and W. L. Lewis, $10.

How Our Plan of Selling Whiskey Saves the User Money

When you buy whiskey from a store you are obliged to pay three profits on the cost of production—the distiller's, the jobber's and the dealer's. This means that you pay $1.50 for a quart bottle of whiskey which would cost you but 75c. if you could buy from the distillers.

Our famous Callahan Home Whiskey is a mellow, 10-year-old whiskey of superior quality and flavor, that would cost you $1.50 a quart bottle at retail, and would be worth it. But we sell it direct to the user, cutting out the middlemen's profit, and give four full quarts for $3, which is at the rate of 75c. a quart, or one-half what you would have to pay at retail. But more than this: Knowing that we have the best whiskey at the lowest price, we ask you to try Callahan Home Whiskey at our expense.

Read this straightforward offer, free from all ifs and ands:

Simply send us $3 for four (4) full quarts of Callahan 10-year-old Home Whiskey, and we will promptly ship the goods to any railroad point in New England, express charges prepaid. Sample a bottle, and if not thoroughly satisfied with your purchase, return the case to us, at our expense, and your $3 will be returned without argument or delay.

We mean exactly what we state. The entire risk is ours. You have no expense if we do not please you.

WALL STREET HOLDS ELECTION BETS; ASK FOR OFFICIAL COUNT

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Wall street showed plainly to-day that sentiment in the financial district was generally favorable to the opinion that Hearst had been elected in spite of the Murphyized returns.

Practically all the betting commissioners on the street notified their clients that no bets would be paid until receipts of the official count.

Fred Brooks, perhaps the best known betting commissioner on the street, told the Evening Journal and sent out a statement to the New York News Association that he would pay no bets until the legal recount was in. "The returns on their face prove nothing," he said.

THEORIES ABOUT FOOD

Also a Few Facts on the Same Subject

We hear much nowadays about health foods and hygienic living, about vegetarianism, and many other fads along the same line.

Restaurants may be found in the larger cities where no meat, pastry or coffee is served and the food crank is in his glory, and arguments and theories galore advanced to prove that meat was never intended for human stomachs, and almost make us believe that our sturdy ancestors, who lived four-score years in robust health on roast beef, pork and mutton must have been grossly ignorant of the laws of health.

Our forefathers had other things to do than formulate theories about the food they ate. A warm welcome was extended to any kind, from bacon to acorns.

A healthy appetite and common sense are excellent guides to follow in matters of diet, and a mixed diet of grains, fruits and meats is undoubtedly the best.

As compared with grains and vegetables, meat furnishes the most nutriment in a highly concentrated form and is digested and assimilated more quickly than vegetables or grains.

Dr. Julius Remmson, on this subject, says: "Nervous persons, people run down in health and of low vitality should eat meat and plenty of it. If the digestion is too feeble at first it may be easily corrected by the regular use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal. Two of these excellent tablets taken after dinner will digest several thousand grains of meat, eggs or other animal food in three hours, and no matter how weak the stomach may be, no trouble will be experienced if a regular practice is made of using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply the pepsin and diastase necessary to perfect digestion, and every form of indigestion will be overcome by their use.

That large class of people who come under the head of nervous dyspeptics should eat plenty of meat and insure its proper digestion by the daily use of a safe, harmless digestive medicine like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, composed of the natural digestive principles, pepsin, diastase, fruit acids and salts, which actually perform the work of digestion. Cheap cathartic medicines, masquerading under the name of dyspepsia cures, are useless for indigestion, as they have absolutely no effect upon the actual digestion of food.

Dyspepsia in all its many forms is simply a failure of the stomach to digest food, and the sensible way to solve the riddle and cure the dyspepsia is to make daily use at meal time of a preparation like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which is endorsed by the medical profession and known to contain active digestive principles.

"I WILL FULFILL PLEDGES AND STOP GRAFT," SAYS MORAN

Election of Aggressive Independent Nominee, in Face of Combined Opposition of Both Great Parties, the Most Surprising of All Results at the Polls.

John B. Moran, elected district attorney of Suffolk county as an independent candidate, although his opponent had the nomination of both regular parties, declared to-day that he would faithfully fulfil all of the promises he made before his election and that he would stop graft in Boston.

The district attorney-elect tried a case to-day in the Dorchester court. He said it would be his last before assuming office. Just when he will step into the shoes of Mr. Sughrue he has not decided yet. He may take the office on December 1 if he so desires.

Election a Surprise.

The election of Mr. Moran came as a great surprise to most of the voters in the county. On the trains, on the streets and in business houses it was the chief topic to-day in the discussion of the election results.

"He will shake up Boston," one man remarked, "and it needs it."

"He said he would," replied another man, "any everybody knows that he is a man of his word."

Mr. Moran told in his speeches which were printed in the BOSTON AMERICAN—the only Boston paper that printed them—what he would do when elected. He never said IF elected. These are some of the things Mr. Moran said he would do:

"I Will Stop Graft."

I will stop graft in Boston.

The Fenway graft will be investigated.

The door of the Grand Jury will be open at all times to evidence of crime.

I shall take official notice of every offence brought to my attention.

I will investigate the railroad bribery of legislators and jurors.

I will investigate gas corporation bribery of legislators.

I will investigate pay roll frauds at City Hall.

The illegal medical places will be driven from the city.

The Haight & Freese case will be investigated.

I will be merciful and considerate to unfortunate victims of environment.

Mr. Moran's vote is 42,250 to 38,106 for Michael J. Sughrue, a plurality of 4,152.

Moran carries eighteen out of Boston's twety-five wards.

He carries Chelsea and Revere. He is the loser in Winthrop by 168 votes.

Mr. Moran had no backers. He announced himself as a candidate. He went into the race on nomination papers. His opponent, District Attorney Sughrue, was nominated by the Democrats and endorsed by the Republicans. Also he was endorsed by the Suffolk County Bar Association.

This, in a nutshell, was his platform: "When I am elected I will fight graft. The big thieves will get the same treatment as the little ones."

A WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN.

Moran went about the county like a whirlwind. He spoke in every ward in Boston. In each he said substantially the same thing: "When I am elected" (never "If I am elected,"). When I am elected I shall punish the grafters."

"When I am elected," he said, "I pledge myself to bring before the Grand Jury the books of Kidder, Peabody & Co. for the last six years, to investigate the legislative connections of Wardwell, Winsor and Kidder, Peabody & Co., and if the investigation prove a crime, to land the criminals where they belong."

Again he said that the verdict in the famous Crocker will case was secured by bribery of the jury. "I know that jurors were bribed; I know who bribed them; I can name the place where the money was paid, and I can tell the amounts. When I am elected I will put the big briber, whether it be some one of the Crocker family, or some friend who used the money—I will put him where he ought to be."

The recent Dock Trust investigation became a weapon in his hands. "Sughrue refused to hold that investigation until asked to do so by the defendants themselves, and then had them all in to nullify the evidence given by Linehan," he said.

He attacked the Fenway scandal and the suit case murder dens.

"The existence of this Fenway graft is due to the fact that every man involved in it knew the District Attorney's office was not to be feared by him," he said. "Its investigation comes within the scope of the District Attorney's duty. If Sughrue was not governed by his custom of ignoring criminal charges until they come from the lower court Mayor Whelton would not have had to call in an outside attorney to investigate this case.

BLOT OUT CRIME DENS.

"There are from fifty to seventy-five places such as the den where Susan Geary came to her death in Boston. When I am elected District Attorney I will see to it that not only the police officials, but the Police Board itself, perform their duties and blot these places of crime out."

"The only money I spent, outside of the actual expenses of my meetings and my advertising was to pay the men who circulated my nomination papers," he told me early this morning.

"What will I do in the near future?" he said in answer to a question. "Take a vacation? I can't. I've got to settle up all my private practice before I go into the district attorney's office."

"You'll work harder the next two years for the money you'll get than you have in the past ten," joked one of the lawyers present. "Five thousand a year won't look very big for the work you'll do."

"It will be only two years," replied Moran. "I can clean house in good shape in that time, and then the county can have the office back. You know I shall not be a candidate for reelection, under any circumstances."

Moran's Pledges to the People of Boston.

I realize the great importance of the trust imposed on me by the honest, law-abiding citizens, to whom, on the platform, I appealed.

I fought for principles. I appealed to intelligence. I reached the thinking brains of honest men. Alone I made the fight. I would have been overwhelmed in defeat were it not for the facts I presented, for the arguments I used and the pledges I made.

Such ability as I possess, such energy as in me exists, I will devote to a fulfilment of my pledges and to such a course of conduct in the office as will cause no honest man to regret my election.

Again announcing my purpose of not accepting a re-election, I extend to all the thanks of a grateful heart.

To the Boston American,
the only paper which published the substance of my speeches and the only paper which did not editorially support my opponent
I owe a debt of gratitude.
John B. Moran

A PEN PICTURE OF JOHN B. MORAN

John B. Moran, District-Attorney-elect, is one of the most interesting personalities in this city. Life with him has been a struggle from boyhood. It was decreed by fate that he should battle for everything he won; but that was no hardship, for he loved to fight.

He is as fearless a man as was ever known in Boston politics. The bigger the man, the quicker he will tackle him as a foe. He has never asked or given quarter. He could have been a power in the Democratic organization in this city if he had chosen to submit to dictatorship. But he would wear no man's collar, and he would not bear any party collar.

"John B. Moran, independent."

That is his political story told in three words and an initial.

He began the law business in Boston a poor, unknown, struggling lad. He studied law when he was hungry. He was admitted to the bar before he graduated from the law school. He had $5 capital and aged parents depending upon him for support when he went to Roxbury and opened a dingy, bare, inhospitable law office. He bought a cheap sign—the cheapest he could buy. It read, "John B. Moran, Attorney-at-Law."

He bought an old blanket. In it he rolled himself and slept upon the bare boards of his office floor until he was able to buy an old, unkempt office lounge which had more cavities and ridges on its uneven surface than a spur of the Alleghanies. He thought the day of luxury was dawning when he could sleep on that couch.

A Loaf of Bread a Day.

He bought one loaf of bread every day. He lived upon that loaf and water until his first client climbed the stairs that led to that squalid office—with its one law book, one chair and old blanket rolled up and hid in a closet during the day. Moran used to sit upon his apology for his desk while his clients sat in the chair. Moran won his first case. The fee was $15.

Then Moran showed his prodigal nature and the disregard of money for money's sake which has been characteristic of his whole life. He had lived on bread and water for three weeks. He went direct to Young's Hotel. Seated in a comfortable, soft cushioned chair, built on lines as broad as his appetite, he commanded the sleek darkey waiter—

"Bring me a menu!"

Moran ate a $6 dinner and smoked several of the best cigars in the hotel before going back to his Roxbury office.

He began to build up a practice.

One of his most valuable adjuncts was a pair of boxing gloves. This was one of his first purchases. He was looking for practice in the Roxbury Police Court. He wanted to get acquainted with the "gang." It often needed a lawyer. The Roxbury "gang" believed that boxing led to glory. It had made John L. Sullivan, a Roxbury boy, one of the most talked-of men who ever lived.

Gathered In Many Clients.

John B. Moran invited the "gang" to come up into his bare, bleak office, where there was as much room as in a twelve-foot ring, to box with him. They found he could lick any member of the "gang" of anywhere near his weight.

This pleased the "gang." A lad so handy with his fists, and such a good talker, was the kind of a man who would do for them in court. In a few months Moran was making money; he had all the clients that he needed. And he sustained the expectation that he would "scrap" in court. To hear him try a case suited the average Roxbury lad and lassie better than a front seat in a theatre.

But they were not content, "the gang," until they could find a boy who could beat him with the gloves. They rang in a "ringer." They got one of the pitchers of the Boston league baseball club, a man built on Bob Fitzsimmons's lines, to go up to Moran's office and put on the gloves.

"He had the reach of a kangaroo," said Moran, "and the punch of a battering ram. He seemed as high as Bunker Hill monument when I could stand up long enough to look at him. And he had science. The boys had enough before I did and pulled me away."

Won Most of His Cases.

His skill and gameness made him a Roxbury idol. His vote there shows that he is yet.

All the while he was studying law and practicing law and doing both, as was characteristic, for all he was worth. He got practice in the down town courts and he won most of his cases. He was getting a family clientage in Roxbury, and everybody was talking about bright young Attorney Moran, who was getting so many lads out of trouble in Judge Bolster's court, and fighting so successfully in State and federal sessions. His candor and his probity are among the chief reasons why he is to-day enjoying the great success of his life.

Everybody who knows Moran intimately believes absolutely in his integrity. He could afford to attack every grafter and every crook. There is nothing in his own life that gives them a chance to reply.

His fearlessness is that of an honest man; that of a man who is not cowardly because of conscience pricking recollections of his own misdeeds.

When Moran went into politics he made a stir at the start. He had a powerful voice and was a vehement and always interesting talker. He was aggressive from start to finish. Every man who tried him in joint debate found him ready witted, apt and forceful; found him incisive, resourceful and logical. He could sway both a crowd and a jury. He got a personal following that he has always kept.

Helped Elect Curtis.

When the Republicans nominated Edwin Upton Curtis, a Roxbury man, for Mayor, Moran bolted the Democratic candidate, a Back Bay citizen named Peabody. Moran materially aided in the election of Curtis.

When he took office, Mayor Curtis expressed his gratitude to Moran.

"What can I do for you?" he asked.

"One-third of your votes came from Democrats," said Moran. "I want nothing for myself, but I want my friends cared for. Give them one-third of the patronage. Then I can keep them together."

"I can't do that," said Mayor Curtis.

"Then," said Moran, "you will serve just one term. I'll fight and beat you."

Moran kept his word. When Josiah Quincy was nominated by the Democrats, Moran took the stump for him. Quincy won. Quincy would not give Moran's followers the patronage that their leader thought they were entitled to. Ever ready to fight, Moran fought Quincy.

Asked No City Office.

He never asked and he never would accept any office for himself. He never would be a candidate before the people until he decided last summer that he would fight District Attorney Sughrue to the finish. Then he determined to be a candidate for the office Sughrue held. If he could not get a party nomination, he decided he would go before the people as an independent.

There was an old feud between Moran and the district attorney's office. Years ago, Moran from the platform of the biggest hall in town, accused the district attorney of obtaining money under false pretences. He flaunted the charge in the face of prosecuting officers of this county before juries during trials.

"Then," said Moran, "all my cases had to go trial. I had to practically give up practice in the higher criminal courts in this county in justice to my clients. But I would not sacrifice my principle for all the fees ever paid all the lawyers who ever lived."

Moran is accounted a good lawyer even by his enemies. He is one of the best trial attorneys in the State. The number of cases he has won testifies to this. He could have made a fortune in the twenty years past by letting politics go by and attending to his professional duties alone. But Moran cares nothing for money. His purse has always been open to his friends. He has lent freely and spent freely.

Ready to Fight for the Poor.

He has always been ready to try a case for a penniless client. That is one of the reasons why he got so many votes. He has always been ready to fight for the poor and the unfortunate and he never advertised his charity.

Moran has been good to his mother. He has been true to his friends. He loves a friend and loves a foe, too—if the foe will only fight.

Moran is a combination of generosity, liberality and pugnacity.

Moran is first, last and all the time a man.

He is of medium height, spare in figure, with a deep chest, long arms and slender legs. His eyes are bluish beneath a frowning brow. His face is strong and rugged, determination and force is written in every one of its lines and sternly set features. But he has a kindly smile. He is magnetic. The number of his friends tell that he is a man who has lovable traits, and one who can give himself over to genial comradeship.

Deaf to Entreaties.

Many of his best friends tried to dissuade him from running as an independent for the office he has just won at the polls.

But Moran was deaf to entreaties.

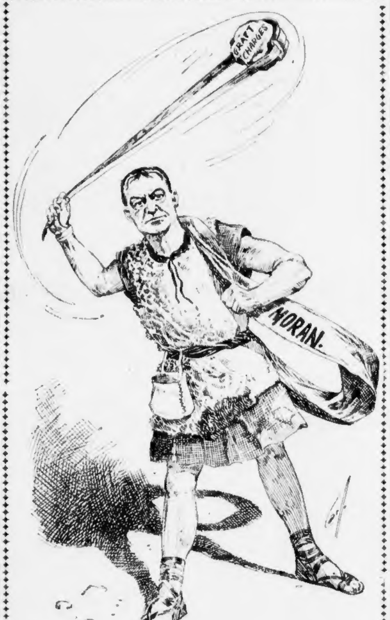
"I will find out," he said, "if Boston wants to punish grafters, if I lose every dollar and every client I might ever get. I KNOW I'M RIGHT. I believe in the people. I am going to put my belief to the test. Men say to me—what following have you got? Did you ever stand up for office to be counted? I'll stand up. I'll stand upon a platform that appeals to every honest man in Boston."

Moran is a bachelor. He lives in a small apartment in the Hotel Navarre on Columbus avenue. He is not a society man in any sense. He does not belong to any secret orders and does not figure at cotillions or pink teas. His life is lonely in the main. He loves to sit and talk with a friend. He loves to talk politics. He loves to talk law and to tell what he wants to do with dishonest men in high places. He is a great admirer of Governor Folk of Missouri, because, Moran says, "He delivers the goods."

At midnight on election eve Moran was asked:

"Do you hate Sughrue?"

"Not personally," replied Moran. "If he was out of office and needed it, I'd lend him money. But I hate his official acts, his oppression and his cruelty to the unfortunate. I am fighting because I believe he is unfit for his office."



CARTOON WHICH PROVED PROPHETIC.

Under the caption "Beware, Sughrue," this cartoon was published in the BOSTON AMERICAN on October 21. Accompanying it was this biblical quotation:

And David took his staff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them in a shepherd's bag which he had, even in a scrip; and his sling was in his hand; and he drew near to the Philistine.—I. Samuel, xvii., 40.

BIG DEFEAT FOR GORMAN IN MARYLAND

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 8.—United States Senator Gorman suffered the second big defeat in his political career in Maryland. The first defeat occurred in 1895, when the State went Republican, thus assuring his failure to succeed himself as Senator.

Now the constitutional amendment, which would have prevented negroes from voting has been beaten by a majority of about 20,000, and may have carried down the Democratic candidates for sheriff, city surveyor and county clerk. Judge Harlan alone, who was up for re-election, as associate judge of the Supreme Court, and was indorsed by citizens, irrespective of party, seems to have pulled through. The vote in the State is likely to increase the majority against the amendment. The returns are still very meagre. It looks as though the Republicans may have a majority in the Legislature, which was largely Democratic two years ago. So strong was the anti-Gorman tide that Howard, his county, went against him.

The only State office to be filled was that of comptroller, and the outcome of this contest is yet uncertain. From present indications Dr. Atkinson, Democrat, may be defeated by McCullough, Republican.

No reliable returns were received from the rural sections until after midnight. The difficulties of marking the ballot also caused a heavy reduction in the vote compared with that cast at the presidential election, though it was shown that the few negroes failed to vote. The weather was perfect, and excellent order prevailed.

SCHMITZ WINS BITTER FIGHT IN 'FRISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Eugene Schmitz, Labor Union candidate, has been elected Mayor of this city for the third time after one of the most bitter and stubbornly contested fights in the history of the city, despite the combination of Republicans and Democrats with a ticket headed by John S. Partridge, with the battle cry of reform party politics.

Complete returns from 197 precincts of the city stand as follows: Schmitz, 38,938; Partridge, 28,503.

Indications are that the rest of the ticket polled the same ratio with few exceptions. The unusual interest taken in the result was shown to-night by a mob of people which gathered in Newspaper Row. Hundreds of unionists paraded up and down in front of the newspaper offices, headed by a band, playing a dead march. Demonstrations were more boisterous than in a presidential year.

Bartlett's majority, 17,054.

Curtis Guild, Jr., was elected Governor of Massachusetts yesterday by a plurality of 23,232.

Returns of the vote for Lieutenant Governor give Draper a plurality of 2,792. A recount may change this materially.

The vote of Whitney was the most interesting feature of the returns.

The election of Guild we apparent from a very early hour. It was not until nearly midnight that it was generally determined that Whitney had been defeated.

WHITNEY TIDE CHANGED.

The early returns from the cities and towns outside of Boston indicated that Whitney would be elected by a safe plurality, and as late as midnight his friends were claiming that he was elected. At seven o'clock they claimed his election by 30,000 votes; two hours later by 10,000, and if the proportion had continued throughout the State as was shown by the percentage of votes then recorded this would have been somewhere near his figure. Other cities and towns to be heard from, however, chanced to show but little lead of Whitney over Bartlett, and the tide changed.

Governor Douglas' plurality in the State last year was 35,989. Guild's plurality for Lieutenant Governor was 50,706.

Whitney ran ahead of Bartlett through out the State, but in no outside section so generally as he did in Boston.

In a number of cities and towns in which Guild led for Governor, Whitney beat Draper. Notable among these were Fall River, where Guild had 649 plurality and Whitney had 239; Newton, where Guild had 1,000 and Whitney had 118; Chelsea, where Guild had 166 and Whitney had 119; Marlboro, where Guild had 86 and Whitney 79, and Mr. Whitney's own strong Republican town of Brookline, which gave Guild 719 plurality and Whitney 378.

There were other cities which, while they did not go for Whitney, gave him big gains. In Lynn, for instance, Guild had a plurality of 919, while Draper's plurality was only 81.

Draper led Guild in a few places—most notably in Gloucester and Haverhill, and ran about even with him in Fitchburg and Lawrence.

In Chicopee and Holyoke Bartlett led Whitney. This was also true of a few smaller places.

There were interesting features of the election, which a perusal of the tables of figures will show. One of the most interesting is the rebuke given Senator Lodge in his own town of Nahant, where Guild received 107 plurality and Draper, on whose candidacy Senator Lodge had made a personal issue, received a plurality of seventeen.

WHITNEY FIRST IN BOSTON VOTE

Boston gave Charles W. Bartlett, for Governor, a plurality of 17,054. Henry M. Whitney's plurality in the city for Lieutenant-Governor is 25,449.

This is a reversal of the conditions last year, when Governor Douglas went out of Boston with 33,078 plurality, and Crosby's plurality for Lieutenant Governor was but 18,974.

There was not a ward in the city in which Bartlett received as many votes as were given Douglas in 1904. Ten wards gave Whitney a larger total vote than they gave Crosby last year, and in the aggregate Whitney received within 508 votes of the total cast for Crosby. When it is realized that nearly 7,500 more votes were cast for Lieutenant-Governor last year this is a remarkable result.

The vote of Boston for Governor:
Bartlett, 47,693; Guild, 30,639.
The vote for Lieutenant Governor:
Whitney, 50,822; Draper, 25,373

SLUMP IN CITY VOTE.

The slump in the total vote is explained the fact that last year was both a dential and a congressional year, neither of these offices were to be yesterday. The reversal of the lead ticket from Governor to Lieutenant nor is to be explained in the same ses that came near electing Whitney in the State. Much of it may be attributed to Republican defection because of Mr. Whitney's stand on the question of reciprocity.

The main city returns on the two highest offices of the ticket were received surprisingly early last night, every Ward's vote for Governor and Lieutenant Governor being in hand at 8:40 o'clock. This is as early as it has been possible previously to secure the returns on Governor alone.

RECEIVING THE RETURNS.

The Republican Club of Massachusetts gathered at Jordan Hall and received the returns. They cheered enthusiastically as the bulletins on the screen showed Guild to be gaining, and were duly sympathetic as it looked for a long time as though Draper was defeated. Part of the balcony was filled with women, who had been especially invited, and between the bulletins there were pictures of party leaders from Lincoln to Roosevelt, with likenesses also of Guild and Draper, and music was furnished.

The gathering of Democrats in the Council Chamber began as a rather perfunctory sort of meeting. They were not greatly excited by any of the bulletins during the early part of the evening, because Whitney was running ahead of his ticket and gave indications of winning, and that was what they expected. If it hadn't been for the spectacular finish of John B. Moran, there would have been very little excitement at this meeting. As it was, there was plenty late in the evening. It was midnight before this gathering disbanded.

CANDIDATE DEAD.

With his name on the ballot as a candidate for the Senate in the First Norfolk Senatorial District, on the Socialist ticket, and with friends and constituents voting for him, William Packard, of Quincy, did not live to see the result of his great fight. He was taken suddenly ill late Monday evening with heart failure, from which he died yesterday at No. 11 Circuit street, Roxbury.

Handsome Personal Tribute to Guild

I think the magnificent vote for General Guild was a handsome tribute to him and also represented the great work that the city and town committees have done without pay, solely in the interest of the party. They ought to be given a great deal of credit, as this was an off year, since they got the vote out in great shape. Personally, I appreciate very much the vote I received, especially the substantial endorsement in the Western part of the State.—Attorney-General Dana Malone in a statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Bartlett Accepts Verdict of the Jury Cheerfully.

General Charles W. Bartlett, the Democratic candidate for Governor, gives out the following statement:

From the complexion of the returns I have come to the conclusion that the Republican party has carried the election in this State, and that the Democratic party has lost. I have only to say that from the time the contest commenced until the people began to vote I have given them the best article of fight I had on hand, and that I accept the verdict of the people just as I have always accepted verdicts that were against me.

The people must decide these matters just as they think right. Instead of having the State of Massachusetts as a single client for the next year, I shall start in at once with other parties as clients and proceed to try an assigned case to-morrow.

I desire to express to my friends my gratitude for all that they have done for me during this canvass, and extend to my opponents full credit for the victory that they have won.

MILLIONAIRE THAW DIVORCED BY WIFE

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—In the same week in which his new $500,000 residence in East Eighty-ninth street, near Fifth avenue, was practically completed, Edward Thaw, of a Pittsburg family noted for its wealth and for incidents connected with the recent marriages of some of its members, was divorced by his wife, who was formerly Miss Frida Marsh, a member of New York society. The decree was signed by Judge Gildersleeve. Mrs. Thaw said the divorce had been obtained on statutory grounds.

DEMOCRATS HAVE 5 ON COMMISSION OF 7

Five Democrats will represent Boston on the special commission of seven to re-district Suffolk county. The total vote for the candidates was as follows:

J. Porter Crosby, (D.) 39,255; Arthur W. Dolan, (D.) 39,009; Malachi L. Jennings, (D.) 37,133; Edward A. McLaughlin, (D.) 37,467; Richard Sullivan, (D.) 38,204; Edward J. Bromberg, (R.) 32,026; Franklin L. Codman, (R.) 30,227; Fred C. Gilpatric, (R.) 27,682; Milton C. Paige, (R.) 29,595; Myron E. Pierce, (R.) 28,527.

CAMPAIGN HAS DONE GOOD, SAYS WHITNEY

Henry M. Whitney said: "I believe that the result of the voting on the lieutenant governorship does not accurately represent the full strength of the views of the people of Massachusetts touching the question of reciprocity and tariff revision. Many Republicans who at heart, and as a matter of judgment, are with us on these issues find it difficult or impossible to break away from their sentimental attachments to their party. They have shirked their duty to their city and State and will, in my judgment, live to regret it, if, indeed, they do not already regret it.

"The cause I have been advocating is clearly the cause of our commercial and industrial welfare. The city of Boston cannot thrive in her commercial concerns unless she can in some way enlarge her trade relations with other countries; and our industrial enterprises demand free raw materials and our people cheaper food supplies.

"I am surprised and disappointed that so many of our people refuse to see the necessities of our condition, but the campaign has done much good, and I do not in the least regret the part I have taken in it. It has served to open the eyes of many and unless something substantial is done by the Republican party in the direction of giving us the relief we need, another campaign like this last will land the Democratic party in power with a substantial majority.

"Having no interest in the matter beyond the interests of the State of Massachusetts, I trust the leaders of the Republican party will take warning by the result of this election, and if they do this my labors will not have been in vain."

HOW TOWNS IN STATE VOTED ON PARTY LEADERS

Rural Districts by Support of Draper Turned Apparent Defeat to Victory.

OVERCOMES BOSTON LEAD

Here is the vote of the towns of the State for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. The returns are interesting chiefly in that they show how Draper, handicapped by Whitney's lead of over 25,000 in Boston, finally overcame that lead and by good support, especially in the central and western sections of the State turned an apparent defeat into a victory by a narrow margin.

Guild Pleased at Victory in an Uphill Fight for Election

Governor-Elect Curtis Guild, Jr., gave out this statement last night just before he left the American House for his home:

The Republican party has won after an up-hill fight against the heaviest odds in the shape of campaign funds and newspaper articles that we ever faced in the history of this Commonwealth. That Mr. Draper and I have won is a splendid tribute of the confidence of the people in the Republican control of the Commonwealth and their belief in the sincerity of our Senators and Congressmen in their pledge to do their utmost for progressive legislation in regard to the tariff.

In my immediate antagonist, General Bartlett, I have found no change from the friend and gentleman with whom I have always had such pleasant relations in private life.

I am very grateful to the faithful friends who in this election have stood by me and the principles of the Commonwealth and country which I have tried to champion.

It is a very great trust to be placed upon me. I wish I better deserved it.

T. F. CURLEY TURNED DOWN

The defeat of ex-Representative Thomas F. Curley in Ward 17 was one of the surprises of the election in Boston. After Curley had been selected as one of the regular candidates of the party by the State Democratic Committee, after a tie vote at the primaries with ex-Congressman Michael J. McEttrick, it was thought that the latter would withdraw from the race and leave the field clear to his opponent.

McEttrick, however, entered as an independent, and with the aid of the friends of "Teddy" Glynn, the other Democratic nominee, McEttrick defeated Curley.

Curley's defeat was as much of a surprise to himself as to anyone else in the ward. His organization had held control so long that he believed he would win out, even ahead of Mr. Glynn. This was the vote in the ward:

Glynn (D.), 1,712; McEttrick (Ind.), 1,661; Curley (D.), 1,392; Sterling (R.), 615.

GOLDEN RULE TICKET WINS IN TOLEDO, O.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 8.—Returns indicate that Brand Whitlock, the author, who stood on a Golden Rule platform, as practiced by the late Sam Jones, has been elected mayor. He was an independent, and indications are the entire independent ticket has been elected with him.

REPUBLICANS WIN IN NEW JERSEY, 3 TO 1

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 8.—The New Jersey Legislature, as the result of the State election, will stand as follows:

Senate—Republicans, 17; Democrats, 4. House of Representatives—Republicans, 45; Democrats, 15.

REPUBLICAN MAYOR FOR ASBURY PARK

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 8.—Charles Atkinson, Republican, for mayor, carries Asbury Park by 230 majority over Harvey, Democrat.

STOKER MAYOR IS DEFEATED

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Nov. 7.—After a rapid rise from fireman in a mill at $14 a week, to Mayor at $3,000 per year, Dennis Mulvihill, the "Stoker Mayor," and the entire Democratic ticket were defeated today by the Republicans by 900 majority. Mulvihill was a candidate for a third term, was defeated by Marcus L. Reynolds, a fellow worker in the mill where Mulvihill was employed.

The "Stoker Mayor" has attracted considerable attention since he reached the chief executive's chair. He was talked of "as the next Governor of Connecticut" in 1902, but the plan fell through. The defeat of "Stoker Mayor" Mulvihill at the hands of a former fellow employe is felt keenly.

BROTHERS IN STATE SENATE

Guy W. Cox, who defeated Senator Leahy in the Fifth Suffolk District, and Louis S. Cox, elected to the Senate from the Lawrence district, are brothers, being sons of Warden Charles S. Cox of the New Hampshire State prison at Concord. Both are graduates of Dartmouth, Guy in 1893, and Louis in 1896. Both are lawyers, each having built up a lucrative practice. Both were high scholarship men in college, and prominent musicians, Guy being an accomplished pianist and Louis a singer of no mean ability.

BLOWS STORM OUT TO SEA

The fierce storm reported off Minot's Light and bound for Boston has been sidetracked from this city by a wind which blew it out to sea. This is sparing Boston today the cold wave and snow which was forecasted for it.

This storm swept Maine, Northern New Hampshire and Vermont. The snowfall in Maine was eight inches in many districts. Railroads and shipping interests, which were preparing to be snow-driven, find the weather still fair, though chilly.

GIRL ATTACKED AND ROBBED BY MAN AND WOMAN

Florence Saunders Carried to Strange Room and Later Taken Home.

FOUND ON DOOR STEPS

Florence Saunders, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Saunders, of No. 109 School street, Cambridge, is in a dangerous condition after being knocked down, robbed and carried to an unknown room unconscious, and later taken to her home and placed on the front door steps, still unconscious.

The young girl says she was robbed by a man and woman on Columbia street, about 100 yards from her home, as she was coming from a store.

Fifty cents in change, some coffee she had bought and a gold stick pin were taken from her.

To a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN Mrs. Saunders said:

"I had sent Florence to a store to purchase some coffee. I gave her a $1 bill. I did not see her again until 9:30 o'clock, when my husband, being alarmed because she did not come home, went out to search for her. As he left the house he found her lying unconscious on the steps.

"When Florence revived she said that she had passed a man and woman on Columbia street and that they turned and struck her on the side of the head. She fell to the ground unconscious, and the next she knew she was in a strange room. She again sank into unconsciousness, and when she revived again we had found her and she was in her own room.

"I often send Florence to the store to pay the weekly bills, and sometimes she has $12 or $15 with her. I believe some one knows she has money with her at times and was waiting for her."

105 COSSACKS KILLED BY RUSSIAN RIOTERS

FIGHTING CONTINUED SEVENTEEN HOURS, AND BOMBS WERE HURLED AT SOLDIERS.

BATOUM, Russia, Nov. 8.—One hundred and five Cossacks out of 120 were killed in a conflict which occurred to-day between rioters and the Cossacks at Nasakofre. The fighting between the people and the soldiers continued for seventeen hours.

The rioters resorted to the use of bombs, which were thrown at the Cossacks, with disastrous results, and most of the troopers were killed in this way.

$2,000,000 FOR OLD MEN'S HOME

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Chicago will have the largest and most generously endowed home for old men in the world, in a day when the forced idleness of aged is attracting universal attention.

It will be the "James C. King Home for Old Men" and it will be made possible by a bequest, estimated at considerably over $2,000,000, in the will of Mr. King, who died last Wednesday.

After bequeathing $100,000 to his widow, $600,000 to other relatives, and $90,000 to eight Chicago charitable institutions, and to a hospital in Pasadena, Cal., the residue of the estate is set aside for the purpose of building and endowing a home for old men who have been unable to provide for themselves.

MISSING MAINE GIRL IS BACK

WEST NEWFIELD, Me., Nov. 8.—Iola Reed, the fourteen-year-old girl who was reported abducted by Charles H. Nowell, a Sanford insurance agent, has returned home.

She came on the train from Boston, reaching East Wakefield, N. H., at 5 o'clock. Her mother and two older brothers met her with tears.

Iola declined to say where she had been, but said she would tell her story to the proper persons and would convince them that she has not been away with Nowell. She said she did not leave Newfield with him and has not seen him since she left home.

The hunt for Nowell is still going on. County Attorney Emery and Sheriff Athorne were in Boston when notified of the girl's home-coming. They believe Nowell will now return to Sanford and face the accusation against him.

TREATY WITH TINIEST STATE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—One of the tasks mapped out for the Senate this Winter is the question of ratifying a treaty with the republic of San Marino. It is only an extradition treaty and will promptly not vie with the Santo Dominican instrument in point of public interest, but there are features about the item which give it the spice of novelty.

San Marino is the oldest state in Europe and the smallest. Its area is only thirty-eight square miles; its population, according to the census of 1889, just 11,002, and it has a standing army of 950 men. San Marino lies on the coast of the Adriatic Sea, in the northern part of Italy, and is governed by a grand council of sixty members and a smaller council of twelve.

If the Senate ratifies the treaty San Marino will establish a consulate general at Washington.

REPUBLICAN SWEEP IN CHICAGO ELECTION

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Four judges of the Supreme Court, one judge of the Circuit Court, nine members of the drainage board and a chairman of that board were elected here to-day, and returns indicate that the Republican party has made a clean sweep by pluralities ranging from 20,000 to 25,000.

IOLA REED AT HOME GUARDED BY SHERIFF

Runaway Girl of 15 Denies She Was With Her Married Cousin, Charles Nowell.

ADMITS SHE WAS IN BOSTON

Special to the Boston American.

SANFORD, Me., Nov. 8.—Fifteen-year-old Iola Reed, who unexpectedly returned to her mother's home in West Newfield while Maine officers were searching in Boston for her and for her married cousin, Charles H. Nowell, is now detained here at the home of Deputy Sheriff Frank H. Preston. She is practically under arrest, awaiting the decision of York County Attorney George L. Emery of Biddeford in regard to her case. The girl stoutly asserts that she has not seen Nowell since she left home, though she admits having been in Boston. She declines to talk about her absence or to explain why she went.

She left Boston yesterday afternoon on the 3 o'clock Portland express, went to East Wakefield and hired the proprietor of the Davis House to drive her over the road to the home of her mother, Mrs. Leila L. Reed. Iola had changed her schoolgirl short skirts for a long skirt, making her look so old that no one about the East Wakefield station recognized her.

Deputy Sheriffs Thomas T. Rankin of Alfred and Frank Preston of this place heard of her arrival home and went to the house. They decided to take the girl in custody. She was brought here to Preston's house, her mother accompanying her. The mother and girl are now at the Preston's.

The mother has talked with the girl, but Mrs. Reed says Iola will not tell her anything yet. Mrs. Reed is overjoyed to have her daughter with her again.

LITTLE GIRL FOILS 3 BOY BURGLARS

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—Neighbors are loud in their praise of Mazie Peters, aged thirteen years, who played girl detective and saved Mrs. Henry Bertz's home from being robbed.

Three boys watched the family depart and planned to invade the house. They found that Mr. and Mrs. Peters, Mazie's parents, were indoors and no other members of the family were to be seen.

Leaving one boy on guard in front the other two slipped through the areaway, one in his bare feet, and crept up the back stairs to Mrs. Bertz's flat. Mazie saw them and spread an alarm which drove them away.

KILLED IN BROAD DAY

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 8.—Louisa Webster, an American woman residing in St. Petersburg, has been murdered in her home in broad daylight.

There is nothing to indicate who the murderers were, but the motive was robbery. She had in the house at the time cash amounting to half a million rubles, equivalent to $250,000, and this money has all disappeared.

ANTI-MORMONS WIN.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Nov. 8.—The American party managers claim the election of Ezra Thompson, anti-Mormon, for Mayor. Returns from eight of the fifty-three precincts in the city give Thompson 1,234, Morris, Democrat, 808, and Lynch, Republican, 601.

ANSONIA REPUBLICAN.

ANSONIA, Ct., Nov. 8.—Stephen Charters, the labor mayor, was defeated by Alton Farrel, Republican. The entire Republican city ticket was elected by a big majority.

3 DIE, SCORES NEAR DEATH IN OFFICE FIRE

San Francisco Chronicle in Flames While Crowds Watch the Election Returns.

MANY NARROW ESCAPES

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 8.—Fire broke out in the tower of the Chronicle building at midnight, and three employes of the Chronicle in the etching room are reported to have perished.

Scores of people were upon the roof of the building watching the election signals when the fire started at the foot of the tower, completely cutting off their escape, except by means of ropes and ladders, which were later provided by the fire department.

The fire burrowed its way downward into the etching room beneath the tower, then to the composing room on the eighth floor. The editorial rooms on the seventh floor soon became untenable, and the employes were forced to flee for their lives.

The Chronicle building was erected in 1902, is ten stories high, and cost $700,000.

DEMOCRATS MAKE GAINS IN BAY STATE SENATE AND HOUSE

WILL HAVE 3 MORE IN 1906 UPPERCHAMBER

Republicans Lose Six in Lower House, Democrats Gain One and Independents Five.

When the Legislature of 1906 convenes in January, nine Democrats will take seats in the Senate, three more than were seated during the session of 1905.

There will be seventy Democrats in the House, a gain of one, and 164 Republicans, a loss of six; and five independent representatives, four more than had seats last year.

There were surprises galore in the election of Senators and Representatives. Perhaps the greatest shock to the Republican party was the defeat in the Third Essex Senatorial District of James F. Shaw by Representative George A. Schofield. Ordinarily this district gives the Republican nominee a plurality of 3,000.

In Boston the friends of ex-Representative Thomas F. Curley were surprised at the defeat of their candidate by Michael J. McEttrick, who ran on a citizens' nomination for the House.

A notable Democratic victory is that of Daniel D. Mahoney of the Second Hampden Senatorial district over Jens Madsen, Republican. Madsen was nominated to succeed Senator Harold P. Moseley.

In Pittsfield the defeat of Senator Burns by Thomas F. Cassidy of North Adams comes as a shock to the Republican leaders.

Another remarkable feature of the election is that for the first time in many years Waltham and Somerville will send Democratic Representatives to the House.

The vote of the Socialist party was so strong that the party obtains official recognition as a political body.

SHAW ROUTED BY SCHOFIELD IN THIRD ESSEX

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 8.—The victory of George A. Schofield, Democrat, over James F. Shaw, railroad magnate, Republican, for the Senate, from the Thirid Essex District, was one of the surprises of the election.

Several circumstances entered into this result. In the first place, Senator-elect Schofield received the nomination while sick in bed, and it was not until about two weeks ago that he entered actively in the campaign. When he did, however, he made a whirlwind fight of it. He made friends wherever he spoke, as he is a man of strong personality and a good stumper.

"But above and beyond all other reasons, perhaps, is the circular letter which Mr. Schofield recently issued. This was headed: "Is this an auction or an election?" It was based upon a statement of expenses of the nomination filed by Mr. Shaw, in which he stated that he had spent over $3,000 in Gloucester and practically nothing in other parts of the district. The people here did not care to feel as if they had been bought and they took their revenge upon Mr. Shaw at the polls. While Gloucester is ordinarily Republican from 1,400 to 1,800, to-day it gave Mr. Shaw but a bare 200 majority.

While the vote in the district was close, the majority of Mr. Schofield is a safe one. The nominal Democratic vote of Gloucester is not over 600. Mr. Schofield has polled over 1,700.

M'LEOD GETS SENATORSHIP IN CAMBRIDGE

For the first time in fifteen years, a Democrat has been elected to the Senate from Cambridge. The candidate, Fred J. McLeod, beat his Republican opponent by the small margin of eighty-five votes. Bartlett and Whitney both carried the University City, and Whitney ran 382 votes ahead of his ticket. The total vote of the city was 12,721, a falling off of over 2,000 from last year.

MacLeod's victory over Clarke was the big feature of the election in Cambridge. He received 5,435 votes to 5,350 given to Clark. While McLed's total was 159 less than that cast for James F. Alyward, the Democratic candidate last year, and Clark. Whil McLeod's total was 150 less publican candidate polled last year. Clark's defeat is generally attributed to the disaffection in the Republican party over the refusal of the convention at the last moment to renominate Senator Rounds, who was a candidate for this year's nomination. At the last moment a majority of the delegates united upon Representative Clark, who the week previous has been refused a renomination to the Legislature. McLeod had the full independent vote in Cmbridge.

DEMOCRATS CLAIM OHIO FOR PATTISON BY BIG PLURALITY

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 8.—The best information obtainable from the State is that John M. Pattison has been elected Governor. The country districts are the ones not heard from. These show unmistakable signs of a landslide for Pattison.

Chairman Garber of the Democratic Committee [illegible] that Pattison has been elected by a big plurality, and would not be surprised if it went beyond [illegible].

Republican newspapers throughout the State admit that the vote will be close, but say Herrick may yet pull through.

NEWPORT'S MAYOR IS DEFEATED AFTER THIRTEEN TERMS

NEWPORT, Nov. 8.—The surprise of election day in Rhode Island politics was the defeat of Mayor Patrick J. Boyle, for thirteen terms mayor of this city, Mayor Boyle going down to defeat before Robert C. Cottrell, the Republican nominee, by a plurality of ninety-three votes. The betting was 2 to 1 on Boyle, but his vote fell off surprisingly in Wards 4 and 5, Democratic strongholds. Mayor Boyle's terms have been consecutive, except the year when he was defeated by Frederick Prime Garretson. Last year, in spite of the big pluralities given President Roosevelt and Governor Utter, Mayor Boyle was successful by a plurality of sixty votes.

Mayor Boyle has had a striking political career. In running ahead of his ticket and winning elections when the chances seemed to be against him he has had uncommon success. At twenty-five he was elected to the Common Council and re-elected five times, the last year serving ing as president of that body. He was then elected Alderman and after serving two terms was nominated and elected mayor by the Democrats.

Since 1877 Mr. Boyle has been an employe of the Newport Gas Company. Last year the unique spectacle was presented of Mr. Boyle, an employe of the company, running against the man who owns the controlling interest, Henry W. Bull, Jr. Mr. Boyle had a plurality of seventy-nine. Mayor Boyle is forty-five years old and although he never spent a day in the public schools he has grown to recognize their worth.

GOVERNOR DOUGLAS DISAPPOINTED AT ELECTION RESULTS

BROCKTON, Nov. 8.—Although disappointed at the defeat of General Bartlett and Henry M. Whitney, Governor Douglas says the fight for recognition of Democratic principles will continue, and feels that the party's candidates made a fine showing.

His statement is: "I am naturally disappointed at the result of the balloting, but I believe as firmly in the principles of our platform now as I did before the result of the voting was known. General Bartlett and Mr. Whitney made a magnificent campaign, and did much to educate the people concerning reciprocity and the demand for free raw material in the interest of our industries and working people.

"We propose to keep up the fight along the same lines until the people are educated to a knowledge of the real needs of Massachusetts industries. Governor-elect Guild will no doubt make a satisfactory chief executive of the Commonwealth."

Governor Douglas voted at 11:35 in the forenoon. He smilingly greeted acquaintances, watched the ballot box swallow the paper he had checked and then walked home to lunch.

He received the returns in a newspaper office and at about 8 o'clock, when convinced that the fight was lost, gave out a statement and was driven home.

BLACKBURN WILL SUCCEED HIMSELF

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 8.—One hundred and forty-two precincts out of 184 in Louisville give Paul C. Barth, Democratic nominee for mayor, 15,337, and O'Neal, fusion, 12,973. Barth's plurality, 2,364. In thirty-three districts Democrats elected twenty-nine legislators, the Republicans three and one is doubtful.

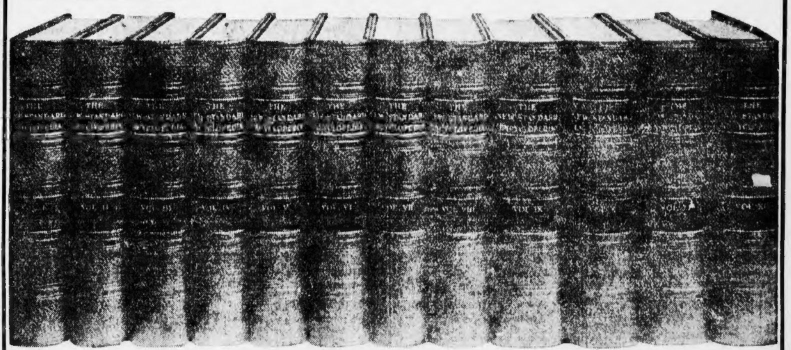
THE BOSTON AMERICAN

INVITES YOU

To join a great Co-operative Club. The Boston American believes that there should be an Encyclopedia in every home; not one of those cheap, trashy affairs, rehashed from foreign sources, but a first-class, up-to-date reference library, containing all the latest and most exact information on every subject. This newspaper receives hundreds of letters daily asking questions which could easily be answered by a good Encyclopedia.

If you can afford only one set of books, by all means let it be an Encyclopedia. The Encyclopedia sums up the knowledge of ages. It gives in easily digested form the knowledge of practical men—each one an authority in his own particular line—complete and accurate information on every subject, written in words that all can understand.



An Encyclopedia for Every Home

Heretofore good Encyclopedias have been put on the market at abnormally high figures, ranging from $80 to $160, prices which only the rich could afford to pay. The Boston American's object in organizing this Co-operative Club is to overcome these high prices, hence arrangements have been made with the owners of The New Standard Encyclopedia for an entire edition of that famous work, which will be distributed to those who join the Club at the lowest wholesale price and on a plan of sale which places it within the reach of the most limited income.

This Club illustrates the enormous advantage of Co-operation. Complete sets are shipped direct from the publishers to the purchasers—no middleman makes a profit.

IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING

If you have no Encyclopedia at all, or if you have one that is old and unsatisfactory, it will cost you nothing to get full particulars of this wonderful opportunity, which is now open to you, but which will not remain open long. The accompanying coupon, which should be mailed promptly, does not obligate you to join the Club, but merely signifies that you are interested and would like full particulars. On receipt of the coupon we will send you a book of specimen pages from the Encyclopedia, showing some of the illustrations, portraits of prominent men, maps, beautiful colored plates, sample articles, etc., etc. With the specimen pages we will also send full particulars of the Club, showing how easily you can secure for yourself and your family the benefits of this Co-operative enterprise.

This Offer Is Made Only to Responsible Men and Women
No Children Need Apply.

The New Standard Encyclopedia was selected for this great enterprise because it is the latest and best reference work on the market, being specially adapted for the home, for the busy man and for school students of all ages. It is a practical Encyclopedia, written by practical men for practical people. You can find here just the information you need, quickly, conveniently, and in the most comprehensive and concise form. Although only recently completed, it has been widely adopted for use in schools and other institutions, and it is recommended by leading educators everywhere. Complete in twelve massive volumes, containing 55,000 complete articles—almost 900,000 topics—5,000 illustrations, 150 large colored maps, etc., etc. A home university in itself, containing the equivalent of 100,000 separate volumes, boiled down and condensed, edited by 200 of the world's greatest scholars and educators.

AMERICAN GETS FIRST NEWS TO GREAT CROWDS

Bulletins at Adams Square and on Summer Street Draw Thousands.

CHEERS FOR WINNERS

The BOSTON AMERICAN scored a big hit with its duplicate bulletin service for election returns.

Thousands of people, men and women, stayed in Adams square and at the corner of Summer and Devonshire streets during the evening, reading the election returns from all over the country, as bulletined hot from the telegraph wires on the big illuminated canvases of the BOSTON AMERICAN. The public speedily found that the BOSTON AMERICAN was giving the quickest and most complete bulletin service in the city and took full advantages of this.

The BOSTON AMERICAN had unusual facilities for obtaining the election news and posting it. The city and suburban returns were secured by its staff of hustling correspondents and were telephoned in to the office at the earliest possible moment.

The New England, New York and national returns were flashed into the office not only by the BOSTON AMERICAN'S leased wire to New York and the West, but also by three other separate and distinct news telegraph services. This made a combination which was perfect. It made possible comparison of reports from disputed sections, which was of unusual value in an election where so many important contests were so remarkably close. It insured the quickest service, also the most comprehensive.

News Constantly Arriving.

With an army of correspondents sending election news constantly from all over the country, a flood of returns kept pouring into the BOSTON AMERICAN office all the late afternoon and evening.

Bulletining this news was done as fast as brains and energy could accomplish it. As soon as dispatches were received they were dashed upon the illuminated canvases, announcing to the crowds in the street the news from this place and that.

The natural result followed. Standing room was at a premium in the streets in front of the Adams square and Summer street bulletins. The thoroughfares were black with people. They were good natured, orderly and obeying, as well as an election crowd can, the behests of policemen to keep a passage open for pedestrians.

It was a study in human nature to watch the crowd watching the returns come in. The announcement of this candidate's lead or that one's was received with cheers from his respective sympathizers and silence from his opponents.

The close fight for the district attorneyship kept interest at fever heat.

The unparalleled contest in New York did likewise. It was noticeable that Boston sympathy was with the Hearst campaign. News from the successive election districts was received with absorbed attention, with hearty cheers sounding as the gradual gain of the Hearst ticket was bulletined.

Typical of Election Night.

The election news was varied with moving pictures of a humorous nature, furnishing just that touch of fun that is so dear to the American public. Laughter was heard at some funny picture, then came the cheers of sympathizers as the bulletin service switched to an important election item, hot from the wires.

It was a typical election night crowd, this gathering at each BOSTON AMERICAN bulletin. There were business men, stopping on their way home to get the latest news. There were laborers, politicians, men of all trades and men of none. There were pretty girls out with their sweethearts, flushed with the excitement of being out in an election crowd. There were men who received the returns calmly, accepting the victory or defeat of their candidates philosophically. There were enthusiasts who were elated or despondent in turn, ready to cry their favorite's cause with any chance debater. There were all sorts and conditions of people, but all watching the big shining canvases which were giving the BOSTON AMERICAN news service in record time.

JOHNSON IS GREAT JOKER

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—President Ban Johnson has stayed the fluttering of the Chicago heart over the rumor that the American League headquarters were to be removed to New York. He said the Eastern owners had tried to get him to leave Chicago, but he preferred living in that town to New York. He volunteered no reason for his preference.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

SHEVLIN TO FACE BROWN

Special to the Boston American.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8.—Yale football players to-day resumed active practice, having had a four days' vacation since Columbia, although slaughtered, wore down Yale to a fine condition. Captain Shevlin held off because of his strained back. He will not play till he leads his team against Brown Saturday.

Cates, Morse, Tad Jones and Flinn were all out of the lineup to-day. Morse wants to play Saturday, despite his broken nose, but the coaches have vetoed his request. Cates and Jones will not be allowed to play till the Princeton game, but there is a chance that Flinn will be allowed to work Saturday. None of them reported to-day. Congdon was in Cates's place at left end, but his work is very inferior. He is very slow and overweight.

Line Coach Ralph Bloomer returned to-day from West Point, where he has been coaching the tackles for the navy game. Foster, Sanford and Frank Hinkey have joined the coaches' ranks for the season.

Hoyt, who was left halfback last year, and Harry Jones, the former Exeter end, have returned to the squad, and both have a fair chance of getting into the play for a part of the matches with Harvard and Princeton. Hoyt is the best punter at Yale, but he has had no scrimmaging since he was injured six weeks ago and could not stand a full game. Jones would have succeeded Cates at left end but for his recent injury. His shoulder was sprained.

FORT BANKS HAS KICK.

Members of the Fort Banks football team have a grievance against the Revere A. A., claiming that in a football game between the two teams the referee, who was a Revere player, gave the Fort Banks team the worst of it and the team did not get the guarantee offered.

IT MAY BE LAST GAME WITH PENN

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—Penn did its last hard work yesterday in preparation for the Harvard contest. The showing was quite satisfactory to the coaches. Two touchdowns were made by the varsity on long runs by Greene and Johnson.

Another matter that is causing the coaches considerable worry is that Stevenson has failed to come up to his last year's form in tackling and carrying the ball. The fact that the team is to be kept in Philadelphia and not sent out of the city, as is usual, shows that the coaches propose to keep the men going through signals on Franklin field and otherwise occupied. None of the men are stale, and they all appear to be in fine physical condition.

The sale of seats for the Harvard game has been so brisk that only a few remain in the end sections. It is felt by many that this will possibly be their last opportunity to see a Penn-Harvard game in Philadelphia, for some years at least.

MELROSE A. C. GIVES BOUTS

Two exhibition bouts furnished sport for the members of the Melrose Athletic Club at their rooms last night. The first two lads put up a lively scrap for five rounds, while the latter went three rounds.

Three hundred members of the club were present.

WILL DISCUSS LAMSON'S CASE AT HARVARD

Professor H. S. White, when seen last night in regard to the report that Harvard and Pennsylvania would break off athletic relations after the game Saturday, stated that he regretted that so much talk had been caused tending to render the relations of the two universities less harmonious.

A meeting of the Harvard athletic committee will be held to-night, and it is probable that something will be done concerning the eligibility of Lamson.

IN LIVELY PRACTISE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON AT SOLDIERS' FIELD.

HARVARD VARSITY ELEVEN PUTS UP A WONDERFUL DEFENSE

If the Harvard varsity eleven plays in Philadelphia this coming Saturday as they played in practice on Soldiers Field yesterday afternoon against a strong second team, Penn will have to play the best game that she has shown this year in order to hold the Crimson men. In forty minutes of play the varsity eleven scored six touchdowns against the Second, while the latter managed to get one after having been given the ball on the varsity's five-yard line.

The defence of the varsity eleven was terrific. The backs not only went into the line with a smash and a bang and came out with everybody hauling the runner along, but they ran brilliantly in the open field.

Captain Hurley went around the end in the first half and ran ninety-five yards for a touchdown and a moment later ran the kickoff back forty-five yards. Jack Wendell received the kickoff in the second half after he had taken Captain Hurley's place at right half. He went back fast and tore through the whole second team for a run the length of the field and a touchdown.

Lockwood Played Fullback.

Lockwood played full back on the varsity and showed up in brilliant style. Lockwood is of the tall rangey type. He is a six footer and weighs 180 pounds. Last year he ran on the Crimson track team as the third fastest man in Harvard in the 100-yard dash. Lockwood's speed was shown yesterday when he broke through the second eleven's line and ran 40 yards for the varsity's first touchdown. Hanley did not get into the game at all yesterday. It looks like him or Lockwood to play the position of fullback for Harvard against Penn next Saturday.

The defense of the varsity was hammered at by the varsity and with good effect. In the first half the second team got the leather on the varsity's twenty-five yard mark after a fumble by Lockwood. Not an inch, however, could the second gain and the ball went to the varsity. Toward the end of the second half the second was given to the second on the varsity's forty-yard line but could make no advance. Then the leather was handed them on the twenty-five-yard mark and then on the ten, but the varsity prevented a score. Once the second got the ball on the varsity half-yard mark but could go no farther.

The attack of the second eleven is not that of the University of Pennsylvania but it was strong with Buck Harrison and Ted Meier, last year's tackle, playing the tackle positions on the second. The brace in defense was what the coaches ha been working for and the varsity's stout resistance was a source of delight to them.

Knowlton at Right End.

The most remarkable change in the varsity line up was the placing of Dan Knowlton at right end. Knowlton has been out of the game for a week with water on the knee and in that time Bert Squires has got back into the game. Both of these men were too good to loose and so Knowlton is being tried at end, with Squires kept at right tackle. It is too bad that the move was not made a week ago as it probably would have been had Knowlton not been injured.

The former All America tackle weighs 187 pounds and is always one of the fastest men down the field and among the surest tacklers on the Harvard squad. With him at end and Squires at tackle the right side of the Crimson line should be much stronger than it was last week against the Indians. Whether Knowlton will be put in against Penn as an end is a question. He will probably be tried out in that place for a time at least, and by the Yale game there is a good chance that he will be the fixture there.

Leary looks to be first choice for left end at the present time. He was played there first yesterday. O'Brien and Hall were put in after him. That position still remains a puzzle.

Karl Brill and Squires played throughout at left and right tackle. They are undoubtedly fixtures there with Spear as substitute.

Burr and Kersburg were first choice for guard. Peirce succeeded Burr later in the game and MacFadon, Kersburg. White and Cunniff played centre.

Glider played quarter, Dill Starr being kept out as a safeguard. Foster, Hurley and Lockwood were the first set of backs. Leonard, Wendell and Somes went in later. All these back field men will probably be used against Penn with the exception of Somes, whose place Hurley will probably fill.

EDELS TO BOX JOE REED AT LAWRENCE

The Unity Club, Lawrence, ratified a match yesterday that will delight the members of that club. Matchmaker Bell secured Harry Edels, the Chelsea whirlwind, to oppose Joe Reed of Lynn, who is regarded as one of the toughest men in his class in New England.

Both boys are in good shape to go over the distance of twelve rounds. Edels has been in constant training for the last week, and is good enough to-day to step in any ring and give an excellent account of himself.

BOWKER TOO HEAVY FOR A BANTAM

Joe Bowker, the English boxer and holder of the bantam-weight championship title of the world, has grown so heavy during the last six months that he is unable now to fight at that weight. Owen Moran, the bantam-weight, of England, has accordingly claimed Bowker's title of English champion. When Moran arrived on the other side after his successful trip to this country the first thing he did was to post a forfeit of $1,000 and issue a challenge to fight Bowker for the bantam-weight championship of England at 116 pounds.

As neither Bowker nor his manager, "Peggy" Bettinson, matchmaker of the National Sporting Club of London, failed to cover Moran's money within two weeks, Moran hunted up Bettinson and asked him why he did not notice his challenge. Bettinson told Moran that Bowker could not make the weight, 116 pounds, any more, the best he could do was 120 pounds, weighing in eight hours before the battle. Moran thereupon claimed the title and is prepared to meet any lad at his weight in England for $5,000 a side.

SAYS WADDELL WAS INJURED IN FRACAS

CINCINNATI, Nov. 8.—"There has been considerable question as to whether Rube Waddell of the Philadelphia Athletics really did hurt his arm so that he could not pitch in the world's series, or whether he was only playing 'possum,'" said Sid Gottlieb, a former Cincinnatian, who now does business out of Chicago. "I was in Fond du Lac, Wis., in September, and became acquainted with a friend of Pete Husting, who formerly pitched for Connie Mack, and now is a rising attorney of this place.

"During a conversation about ball players this gentleman showed me a letter that Husting had received from Connie Mack, in which the Athletics' manager explained how Rube had been hurt, adding that it was feared that the big southpaw would not be able to pitch again this year. The explanation related how, in traveling near Boston on September 1, some of the players decided that it was time straw hats were discarded, and so proceeded to demolish the 'cadies' of their teammates. Waddell attempted to snatch Coakley's straw bonnet off his head, and the pitcher promptly threw a suit bag at Rube. The big fellow than made a rush at Coakley, and in doing so fell, twisting his pitching arm. That settled him—and this disposes of the story that Rube was 'faking' when he declared he could not pitch in the world's series."

MUSICAL NAVY REHEARSING SONGS FOR WEST POINT GAME

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 8.—The midshipmen have already begun to rehearse the songs and yells which they will use to encourage their eleven at Princeton on December 2, when the Navy and Army clash in their annual football struggle. The midshipmen will undoubtedly have advantage in point of yelling over the Army cadets, as the brigade this year numbers nearly 900, while at West Point there are about 600 cadets.

As the middy eleven marches upon the scene of battle and are making ready for the fray the brigade will burst forth with the following, to the air of "Marching Through Georgia," in honor of the hosts:

Nassau, Nassau, the jolly friends are we,
Nassau, Nassau, ring out the chorus free,
Cares shall be forgotten, all our sorrows thrown away,
While we are marching through Princeton.

In defiance of the bucking Army mules and to the waving baton of their yell master, the Middies will bellow forth:

Army mule, army mule,
You can kick and balk and bray,
But football you cannot play.
Army mule, army mule,
Haw-he, haw-he, haw-he, haw-he,
Army mule.

To show their friendship for the Army, the brigade will sing, to the tune of "Red, White and Blue," these lines:

We've come to play West Point football,
And whether we lose or win
We'll stick tight close to the Army,
Our friends, through thick and thin.
Our team is strong and steady,
And so is West Point's, too:
The Army and Navy forever,
Three cheers for the red, white and blue.

Just to show the West Pointers what to expect and to warn them of the proposition they are going against, this verse will be poured forth from the Navy stand:

West Point, we've come to Princeton
With a team that cannot fail,
Our line is like a stone wall, end to end,
Our backs are strong and sturdy,
Hard as rock and true as steel,
They are rammers for the Navy, if you please.
We have beaten you at fencing,
Also done you up at ball,
And now the only thing that's left to do
To complete the magic triplet
Is to do you up to-day,
And then we will be heroes through and through.
Chorus:
We are bold, bad Mids who have come to-day—
Rah! Rah! Rah!
To put the bug on the Army gay—
Rah! Rah! Rah!
Gentleman sailors from over the lee,
Bound to-night for a Navy spree,
God have pity on such as we—
Rah! Rah! Rah!

Another one will be:

Here's where we beat West Point,
We'll show them how to play,
We've won baseball and fencing,
And we're going to win to-day.
Their team is strong and steady,
But we have little to fear,
'Cause we are the Good Old Navy,
And this is the Navy's year—
Down with the Dough Boys!

In preparation for the time when the Army mule will be bucked all over the field and the Navy backs tear through for big gains this gem, which was a popular song at last year's game, is being rehearsed to the tune of "Put Down Six and Carry Two:"

See us rush the Army through,
Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah!
Gee, but that's a cinch to do,
Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah! Rah!
We will pound and pound and pound
Till their team's no more,
We don't give a rap what the Army does;
She can never score. Rah!

As the bucking mule makes a strong stand or the Navy gains are short and hard earned, this one, to the tune of "Every Little Bit Helps," will be most appropriate:

Let us hold the ball awhile—
Every little bit helps. Every little bit helps.
Watch us give your goal a trial—
Every little bit helps. Every little bit helps.
Now and then a yard or two,
We'll show you what our team can do,
Wait 'till we are through with you,
Rah! Rah!
Every little bit helps.

The above song added to the following, should surely be enough for the Middies:

Talk about your football teams,
We've got the stuff,
Talk about your speedy backs,
Ours are up to snuff,
Talk about your pounding lines,
Ours can pound hard,
We can give the Army ends many long yards,
Chorus:
Come! Come! Come! Play football with us
Down to the West Pointer's goal.
Come! Come! Come! Down and see us
Rush through the Army line's big holes,
Hear the old Navy line pound through the Army's line.
Boom! Boom! Boom!
Come! Come! Come! Play football with us
Down by the West Pointer's goal.

And then this one:

It's a way we have in the Navy,
And it's a mighty good way, too;
For our team is strong and heavy
And our backs will rush past you,
You're so easy you seem breezy,
And your chances now seem very blue;
For it's a way we have in the Navy,
And it's a mighty good way, too.

BROWN MEN ARE IN FINE CONDITION

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 8.—All of the Brown men are in excellent physical condition, no injuries having been sustained in the game with Syracuse last Saturday. Some of the varsity men were not out, among them Captain Russ. All the other linemen were out and got into the signal practice. The back field of the varsity, which practiced signals, was somewhat different from the usual makeup, as Weikert was played at right half, Mayhew at left half and Ehmke at full. This back field was used as the regular back field men were not all out, and does not signify that it is the intention of Coach Robinson to make any changes.

The officials for the Yale-Brown game were announced to-day, and consist of the following: Thompson of New Haven, referee; Hall of Yale, umpire, and Morley, also of Yale, will officiate as head lines man.

TURF WAR MAY KILL RACING IN SOUTH

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 8.—Unless the Western Jockey Club and the American Turf Association avert the impending turf war which is scheduled to begin in New Orleans when the Fair Grounds and City Park tracks begin their Winter meets on November 30, a bill will probably be introduced at the coming session of the Legislature to prohibit horse racing in Louisiana.

It is understood that Representative Hunsicker, a country legislator, who introduced the famous Anti-Poolroom bill two years ago, will lead the fight.

Lieutenant-Governors Sands prepared the anti-racing measure with the understanding that if the turf war is not averted he will use his influence to have the bill adopted. Sentiment is strong against racing, and leading ministers are taking an active part.

DIDN'T TRY TO CRIPPLE YALE TEAM

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Columbia's football players resent the stories that have come from New Haven that Columbia deliberately tried to cripple Yale's players in last Saturday's game. They say that the game was no rougher than that with Princeton, and although Cooney and H. Dillon were hurt in that game no such reports came up from the New Jersey town.

As a matter of fact, they say, the Yale coaches took Jones out when his strained leg was slightly hurt, because they realized that Columbia was so weak that Hutchinson was good enough to run the team, and they say that no attempt was made to cripple any players.

Columbia had the ball only a few times in the whole game, and despite all the alleged roughness failed to gain when they were on the attack or to stop Yale when the visitors were on the offensive.

As to the matter of their being no Yale-Columbia game next year, there was no statement by Columbia. Nothing in the line of schedule-making can be done by either college until next year, when the new managers of both teams are elected.

ATTELL TO MEET MOWATT TO=NIGHT

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Abe Attell is the industrious young man these days. To-night he is to take "Young Corbett's" place and fight Tommy Mowatt six rounds before the Washington Sporting Club in Philadelphia. On November 20 he is to meet Young Erne once more before the same club.

"Young Corbett" was billed for a bout with Mowatt, but on account of a sprained back was compelled to declare all dates off.

Mowatt hails from Chicago and is said to be a rough houser of ability. They call him the "Fighting Conductor" in his native burg because he used to collect fares on street cars before he went into the more lucrative pugilistic "profession," and used to slug right and left when the nickels weren't forthcoming pretty quick from his passengers of the tougher class. A week after his fight with Jimmy Britt, "Young Corbett" beat Mowatt in six rounds.

"Attell will beat him," said "Corbett" yesterday, "but he'll give Abe a run for his money all right, all right. He's a swinger and just butts in like a bear cub. Attell will hit him a hundred times in a minute, but the majority of the blows won't hurt."

Attell's fight with Erne November 20 will demonstrate conclusively who is the best man. These two have fought several times and the last time the Philadelphia sporting writers and the majority of them in New York said Erne had the best of it, but Abe claims he got the worst of the deal from the referee.

"He won't catch me napping this time, however," says Abe. "I'll let him have it good and stout, you can go broke."

Dal Hawkins has returned to life and is also getting busy and hopes to get busier. He will fight Unk Russell before the Washington Sporting Club in Philadelphia November 13, and after that he says he will take on several others.

"I want to go to England," he says, "and fight Jabez White. I can beat White, and the fight would be a good one."

Hawkins is training with Attell at Rye Beach.

RUTGERS WAS BEATEN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—New York University beat Rutgers, 10 to 7, in a hard fought game. Rutgers scored one in the first half on a trick play, when a New York fumble had given them the ball on the home team's ten-yard line. New York excelled in ground gaining all through the game, but did not score until after Rutgers had added two points on a safety in the second half. Then a smashing tandem play worked havoc with the Jersey team's line, and New York rolled up ten points on two touchdowns.

AMHERST WON'T BREAK WITH HOLY CROSS

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Nov. 8.—The break which was threatened by the rough work of Amherst and Holy Cross in Saturday's game, and which for a tiem promised to result in the severing of athletic relations between the two colleges, has been satisfactorily adjusted by Graduate Manager Welsh of Holy Cross and Manager Simonson of Amherst.

ROXBURY AWARDED GAME.

During the first half of the game between Roxbury and Dedham High Schools at Dedham yesterday, when the Roxbury High team had the lead, 6 to 0, Dedham fumbled the ball, Ghoradini securing it for Roxbury. Dedham then refused to abide by the referee's decision declaring the ball Dedham's, and on the advice of Coach Kelly withdrew from the field. The referee awarded the game to Roxbury High, 11 to 0.

WHY WRONGED WIVES NEVER BLAME THE HUSBAND

They Can't Admit the Other Woman Could Supersede Them Fairly

By Dorothy Dix

A FEW days ago a married man eloped with his wife's sister. The woman thus doubly betrayed expresses a vindictive desire to have the utmost penalty of the law visited upon her sister, but implores her husband to come back home and be forgiven.

Not long before that a man in high position deserted his family for his seventeen-year-old, golden-haired stenographer. The wronged wife did not visit one word of reproach or blame upon her husband. On the contrary, she declared that he was a good and noble man, who would have been faithful unto death if he had not been hypnotized by the girl.

These are merely simple cases, showing the bitter injustice that women mete out to each other when any question of the sexes is involved, and anybody's experience will match these incidents with a hundred others. Always and invariably when there is any wrongdoing in which a man and woman are involved women condone the man's part and condemn the woman.

Adam's excuse for sinning has become Eve's. "The woman—she did it." It is always the woman who is to blame, who leads men astray—men who would be impeccable and never think of anything but walking in the straight and narrow path if women didn't beckon them from over the fence.

To Save Her Pride

IT is often asked why this should be so—why every woman should be a female Ishmael whose hand is against every other woman.

The answer is obvious. It is woman's way of saving her pride. No matter what the man has done she means to forgive him and reinstate him in her heart, and she finds it less humiliating to do this by putting him in the light of a victim instead of the criminal.

It would be mortifying to the woman who is fat and grizzle-haired and double-chinned and forty-five to admit to herself that it was because her charms had waned that her husband had deliberately forsaken her for a lissome young creature with rosy cheeks, who is sweet and twenty, and so consoles herself by declaring that the other woman had used some occult power to which a man is not to be blamed for succumbing.

Other women coincide in the verdict, for it is a good, handy explanation of masculine frailty that they may want to use themselves some day, hence it is that a woman always gets the blame from her own sex, while man goes scot free. This extends from the smallest to the greatest things in life.

When a married man takes to drink it is women who express a charitable opinion that he was driven to it by his wife; it is women who explain every bankruptcy on the hypothesis of the wife's extravagance, and in cases of criminal wrongdoing, even when the man is a world-hardened roue, old enough to be the girl's father, every woman who hears of it is convinced that it is the girl's fault and that she led him into it.

If there ever was a line of conduct dictated by pure policy it is the stand that women take on this subject.

As a mater of fact women know that in ninety-nine times out of a hundred it was the man who was to blame, and not the woman.

Nobody in his senses really believes that a woman can elope with a man unless he is anxious to decamp with her, or that a little, young, innocent, inexperienced girl just out of the schoolroom, who goes into a man's office to work, takes the initiative in toting him away from his duty to his wife and family.

Always the Same

IT is easy, however, to see why, in cases of recreant spouses, and fiances with large crops of wild oats to their credit, the convenient and consoling theory of the wicked and seductive woman should prevail among other women.

The wife, either because she still loves him, or for the sake of appearances or her children, is going to take the husband back and overlook past offences. The young girl is going to marry the man with a lurid past, and it "saves their faces," as the diplomatic Chinese say, to invent the fiction that the man was an innocent and unsophisticated being who was dragged against his will and his knowledge into unpremeditated folly.

The other woman is simply a scapegoat that the wronged woman offers up as a sacrifice for the man's sins.

You may see the same spirit, in a very lesser degree, in the attitude that every mother assumes toward her son's wife.

There never was a man married whose mother did not, in her heart, believe to have been taken in. It is her way of explaining to herself the fact that her boy has preferred somebody else before her, and loves another woman better than he does her. She knows he wouldn't have done it, poor, guileless thing, if he hadn't fallen a victim to the wiles of a regular Machiavelli in petticoats.

Why women should prefer to think that the men they love have so little intelligence and so little strength of character, and are such easy marks that they can be taken in by any school girl that comes along, rather than to think that they are responsible for what they do and should bear their own share of the blame, is something that nobody can explain.

It is merely a fact that they do. They find peace and consolation in blaming women for their mankind's faults, and the real reason that every woman carries a knife for her sister woman is in order that she may protect her own pride.

THE WIFE ALWAYS WREAKS ON THE OTHER WOMAN THE RESENTMENT HER HUSBAND USUALLY DESERVES

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

A NATURAL ANXIETY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man and keep company with a young lady. She has a girl friend who I know is no fit company for her. Have spoken to her about it, but it does not do any good. I expect to marry this young lady, and of course am anxious in regard to the company she keeps. G. W. M.

IT is most natural that you should feel an interest in your fiancee's friends. I think she should be guided by you in this case, if you are quite sure that you are right in your opinion of the girl.

UNDERHAND PROCEEDING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a dear, sweet young lady for the last four years, and she is about to be married to a man whom I respect very much. I learned from her that he does not earn more than $10 a week. I have told her that if he has no other source of income it would be advisable to break the engagement, which she has promised to do. Do you think it would be proper for me to propose marriage in such a case? I love the girl more than words can express. L. H.

THE girl loved the man well enough to become engaged to him and you say yourself that you respect him. They could live on $10 to start with. Any number of young people start on that and you should have let them alone. The man will think you are very much to blame if you propose to her after having urged her to break the engagement. It was not a very honorable thing to do.

NOT VERY HONORABLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a young man who has been keeping steady company with a young lady for the past six years. Do you think he will ever marry her, after going with her for so long a time? I don't see him very often, but when I do he makes a great deal of me, although he has never told me that he loved me. What I want to know is this: Is there any way for me to win his love from the other young lady, or is it too late? I feel as if I cannot live without him. He has no bad habits and is a steady worker. H. R.

DON'T you think, my dear, that it would be rather dishonorable to try and steal his love from the other girl? He may or he may not be going to marry her, but that does not give you the right to interfere. If he turns of his own will to you all right, but I do not think it would be right to try and coax him from the other girl.

Ugly Shoes the Rule Among Boston Women

KNOWN BY HER SHOES

EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your editorial on the absence of neatness of footwear among Boston women was timely and true. It is notorious that Boston women are careless, neglectful and indifferent about how their shoes look. An untidy shoe is as culpable as a touseled head of hair, or not having a hat on straight.

A Boston woman is known by her shoes, and so is a New York woman. But there is a difference. The New Yorker may not be up to date in dress, but her shoes are immaculate. The Bostonian may be encased in a Worth street creation, but her shoes—when they fit or are shapely—need blacking and need it badly.

While riding in a surface car last evening I read your editorial. Instinctively I looked at the shoes of the women in the car. I saw twenty pairs, and nineteen of them needed blacking; the owner of the twentieth pair is a shop girl, and she was the best dressed woman in the car, for her shoes fitted and were highly polished.

Why the women of Boston wear untidy and unblacked shoes is easily answered. They are indifferent about the appearance of shoes because they were never trained otherwise. They are not neat, and a visit to their homes would show their shoes indicate their habits.

You judge a man by this process: Hold his eye, view his cravat, then look at his shoes. That is a common rule with all men in "sizing up" their fellow-men. Apply that rule to the women of Boston and you'd trust mighty few and marry none of them—if you wanted a neat home.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

A Story of Adventure Afloat and Ashore

His Campaign Against Philippine Pirates

CHAPTER I.

Against Friends

THE leader of the Malay pirates stood on a little hillock watching his followers at work.

They stood in a group, in the centre of which men were filling up a pit.

The shovels of earth fell rapidly about an object in the centre of the opening in the earth, and the pirate leader observed with impatience that no sound was heard save that of the falling clods.

"Make him cry out," he exclaimed, speaking the Malay tongue. "Make him tell me that he is being tortured."

At the order one of the group of half-clad savages thrust a shovel viciously at the object in the pit. But there was no sound.

The leader leaped from his position and took up a shovel.

With it he beat violently upon the man, for it was a man, and he uttered Malay imprecations.

But he inflicted his tortures in vain, for his victim was young Jack Harkaway, and Jack Harkaway was not the boy to give his tormentors the satisfaction of knowing how cruel was their punishment.

Jack was being buried alive.

In a few minutes only his head would be exposed above the surface of the ground.

Then his persecutors would withdraw and watch the land crabs slowly approach to complete their dreadful work for them.

But with his old courage Jack remained silent.

A Double Duty.

The fiends might kill him, however they chose, but not a cry of pain would escape his tightly closed lips.

Jack Harkaway had been sent a few weeks before by an association of San Francisco merchants to suppress the pirates which made traffic impossible among the lower islands of the Philippines.

A great deal of money had been subscribed for that purpose, and Jack had been fitted out with the smartest little vessel that ever was sent to encounter the savage sea fighters of the southern seas.

It had required much perseverance to persuade him to take the commission.

He was comfortably settled in New York with his wife, who had been Mabel Hunston, and he saw no reason why he should again undergo the perils which had been his daily bread from boyhood.

But Harvey, the love of adventure still upon him, had gone to the Philippines and had fallen into the hands of the pirates, who held him captive.

And Jack, loyal to his old friend, decided to leave his luxurious home and undertake the double enterprise of putting an end to the nefarious business of the pirates and rescuing his old companion, if indeed he was still alive.

It had been found impossible to suppress the pirates by means of the navy.

The Philippines had but lately fallen into the hands of the United States.

There were few boats available and those were engaged in carrying on the war against the rebellious natives.

In the meantime the San Francisco syndicate had discovered rich gold fields on a small island near Behol, but had been unable to get more than one or two treasure ships past the pirates, who had lately come under the control of a wily and crafty leader.

Jack spent some time in San Francisco supervising the outfitting of his ship.

He had taken with him Steel, his old friend, and Tony went along as engineer.

Must Do or Die

His wife had insisted upon going also, and Jack had at last reluctantly consented.

The trip over the Pacific was pleasant.

Jack stopped at Nagasaki to coal his ship, and there enlisted half a dozen lithe, wiry Japanese sailors.

Nearly all these men had been in the waters for which he was bound and understood the Malay tongue spoken among the pirates.

Jack found them invaluable in locating the pirate stronghold, which was one of the small islands near that on which was located the company's gold mine.

He spent the first week cruising about, learning the location of the island, capes, bays and familiarizing himself with the navigable inlets in the neighborhood.

His plan was to bring out a decoy ship, wait until the pirates attacked it, and then swoop down on them.

They used little junks as ships of offence and could easily be cleaned up if they could once be found.

But their method had been to betray the race, sink them on the rocks, and then wait until the crew starved to death before making their attack.

By this diabolical means they had succeeded in capturing no less than six cargoes valued at many millions of dollars.

The new ship, which had been christened the Harvey, arrived off the pirate's island at midnight one dark night.

Jack insisted on going ashore, although Steel and Tony advised him that such a course would be foolhardy.

Buried Alive

But with his usual reckless daring Jack brushed their objections aside, and with two men started out to reconnoitre.

Hardly had he gone a half a mile from the boat when his little craft was swept into a current which she could not hold against, and ten minutes later had been driven into a narrow channel and wrecked in the surf.

Almost instantly a wildly shouting mob of natives bore down upon her, and the three men were taken prisoners.

The others were led away, but Jack, who was recognized as the leader of the party, was taken to a sandy beach, and there a deep pit was dug.

Jack had often heard of the native method of torture by burying the victims to the neck and leaving them to the land crabs, but he thought it too horrible to be true.

Now he knew that his informers had spoken the truth.

As the last shovelful of earth was deposited about his neck the leader called off his men, and Jack, his eyes dilated with horror, saw several great spidery monsters edging up to him from the line of the timber.

They were land crabs, come to finish the torture the Malay pirates had begun.

"CONVICT 99"

A PRISONER FOR LOVE

CHAPTER XLIV.—Continued.

HE was provided with a considerable sum of money, which he set aside for Mrs. De Lacey's benefit.

The pastor explained that he had not seen or heard of Mrs. De Lacy for a long time. He had entirely lost sight of her. But he directed Laurence to a street behind Newport Market, where the woman had lived for some years.

Laurence spent the whole morning in his search, tracing Mrs. De Lacy's successive removals from a respectable dwelling house to a poorer tenement, from the tenement to a garret, each remove making a gradual descent in the scale of poverty. At length he traced her to a narrow alley near Seven Dials. Here he hoped to find her.

He made inquiries of several of the neighbors, but few seemed to remember her, fewer still could tell him anything concerning her. Ultimately he discovered the landlord of the little room in which she lived.

"I am looking for a woman named De Lacy, or Lacy, a French woman," said Laurence. "Can you tell me anything about her?"

The man scratched his head for a moment.

"Lacy, d'you say? Do I know 'er? Well, guv'nor, I did know 'er. 'Tain't likely as I'd forgit 'er. She rented my top floor back—used to sell flowers. Yes, I know 'er. She owed me eight bob, which is four weeks' rent. Didn't she never pay me? W'y, no. 'Coz w'y? She couldn't, and never will now. I sold 'er sticks, which didn't fetch mor'n 'arf a crown. That's all the satisfaction I ever got out of 'er."

"Where is she living now?" asked Laurence.

"Living? She ain't a-livin' now-ere. She's dead—died o' starvation two year ago."

"Starvation!"

"Yes. Nobody seen 'er for three or four days, and w'en we opens 'er door there we found 'er lyin' dead. She orter agone into the union; but, bless yer life, she were too proud, she were."

Laurence paid the man the few shillings that were owing to him and turned away. He felt a deep melancholy come over him as he meditated upon the uselessness of his quest. He was too late. Mrs. De Lacy had died for lack of the help that her convict son had been so anxious to secure for her. Jacques De Lacy's sacrifice had been all in vain.

Shadowed

For a moment Laurence asked himself if it was not now his duty to go back and surrender himself in order that his friend might be set free. But reflection assured him that the temporary detention of De Lacy in prison was best for the poor fellows' own sake. To liberate him now and turn him, orphaned and penniless, upon a cruel world, would be to work his ruin.

On the contrary, this fact of Mrs. De Lacy's death showed him more plainly than ever that it was Laurence's first duty to clear his own name and establish his innocence before the world.

Then, procuring De Lacy's release, he would help and protect him and keep him from again sinking back into crime.

Laurence returned to his lodgings in Soho. During his absence a detective from Marlborough street had called and made several inquiries of the landlady concerning the supposed James Lacy. The landlady, on hearing that her new lodger was a convict on ticket of leave, took alarm, declaring that she had been imposed upon, and when Laurence arrived she immediately demanded her week's rent, and ordered him to quit her premises.

Laurence paid the money and took away his bag—his sole luggage. He wanted to change his clothes in order that he might keep the appointment Geraldine had made for him with the solicitor.

But where was this change to be effected? Walking along Gerard street he found that he was being followed by a man who bore the unmistakable marks of a detective. He went into a small hotel and asked for a private room. When, having changed his dress, he issued forth again, he found the detective still on the watch.

The alteration in his appearance was suspicious in the eyes of this emissary of the police. But Laurence passed by the man boldly and soon contrived to evade him.

The perpetual surveillance was becoming irksome to him. He was liable to be accosted and catechised at any moment, and he dared not attempt to avoid such encounters, since to do so would only awaken still deeper suspicion.

He was beginning to understand the difficulties which confront a ticket-of-leave man who is striving to make a fresh start in the world. He could understand how a discharged prisoner, without friends or money, is made to feel the consequences of his fall throughout the whole of his after life.

A bitter sense of loneliness, of desolation filled his soul. He longed to go at once to Geraldine for comfort, for the assurance that there was at least one human being who loved him and believed in him, one in whose eyes he was no pariah, but an honorable and honored man.

But hours must pass yet before he could see her. The veil of dusk must fall before his journey would be safe.

He went now to the solicitor's chamber in Lincoln's Inn, feeling sick at heart. To prove his innocence after so long an interval seemed to him in this mood an impossible thing. He went in at the solicitor's door as one who had no hope.

When, an hour later, he came forth again, he was a changed man. His eyes were brilliant with a new light, his face was flushed, and his whole body elastic as with the first boundless energy of youth.

It was still too early to go to Fenton Court. But he could rest. He walked about the noisy, crowded streets until the dusk came, and then he sped to Geraldine.

THE RALSTON BANK BURGLARY

Synopsis of Preceding Parts

THE steel safe of the Ralston National Bank is blown open and robbed of $129,000, part of which had been counted and checked by Philip Dunston, receiving teller, and placed in the safe under his eyes and those of Miss Clarke, secretary to President Fraser of the bank. Cashier West actually places the money in the safe.

Just before the safe is locked Fraser enters the bank and takes something out of it. Apparently he puts this in his inside breast pocket. Dunston is positive the floor before the safe was perfectly clear at the time they left the bank, yet in front of the safe is found a handkerchief, the property of Cashier West. This handkerchief was evidently left by the burglars, although Dunston and Miss Clarke saw West leave the bank with a handkerchief in his hands.

Fraser, stunned into inactivity by the blow, sends for Professor Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen, an eminent scientist, so-called The Thinking Machine, for whom he has done a favor. He believes The Thinking Machine can solve the mystery, the police having done nothing definite, attaching no importance to the handkerchief.

With The Thinking Machine comes Hutchinson Hatch, a reporter. To them are told all the known facts. The Thinking Machine examines the premises, then the handkerchief. On this handkerchief he finds a faint odor of perfume. He moves around the office, speaking to the employes. Dunston he finds uses a perfume like that on the handkerchief.

The second of a series of mysteries which come under the observation of Prof. Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen, Ph. D., LL. D., etc., etc., so called

"The Thinking Machine."

PART III.

THE Thinking Machine led the way back to the private office of the cashier, with President Fraser, Cashier West and Hutchinson Hatch, the reporter, following. He closed the door.

"Is it possible for anyone to overhear us here?" he asked.

"No," replied the President. "The directors meet here."

"Could anyone outside hear that, for instance?" and with a sudden sweep of his hand The Thinking Machine upset a heavy chair.

"Why, I don't know," was the astonished reply. "Why?"

The Thinking Machine went quickly to the door, opened it softly and peered out. Then he closed the door again.

"I suppose I may speak with absolute frankness?" he inquired.

"Certainly," responded the old banker, almost startled. "Certainly."

"You have presented an abstract problem to me," The Thinking Machine went on, "and I presume you want a solution of it, no matter where it hits?"

"Certainly," the President again assured him, but his tone expressed a grave, haunting fear.

"In that case," and The Thinking Machine turned to Hatch, "Mr. Hatch I want you to ascertain several things for me. First, I want to know if Miss Clarke in the next room uses or has ever used violet perfume. If so when she ceased using it."

"Yes," said the reporter. The bank officials exchanged wondering looks.

"Also, Mr. Hatch," and the scientist squinted with his strange eyes straight into the face of the cashier, "go to the home of Mr. West here, see for yourself his laundry mark, and ascertain beyond any question if he has ever or any member of his family has ever used violet perfume."

The cashier flushed suddenly.

"I can answer that," he said hotly. "No."

"I knew you would say that," said The Thinking Machine, curtly. "Please don't interrupt. Do as I say, Mr. Hatch."

Accustomed as he was to the somewhat peculiar methods of this analytical genius whose brain reduced all things to their primary logic, Hatch saw faintly the purpose of the inquiries.

Nothing Impossible

"And about the receiving teller?" he asked.

"I know about him," was the reply.

Hatch left the room, closing the door behind him. He heard the bolt shot in the lock as he started away.

"I think it only fair to say here, Professor Van Dusen," explained the president, "that we understand thoroughly that it would have been impossible for Mr. West to have had anything to do with or know——"

"Nothing is impossible," interrupted The Thinking Machine.

"But I won't——" began West, angrily.

"Just a moment, please," said The Thinking Machine. "No one has accused you. What I am doing may explain to your satisfaction just how your handkerchief came here and bring about the very thing I suppose you want—exoneration."

The cashier sank back into a chair. President Fraser looked from one to the other of the two men. Where there had been worry on his face there was now only wonderment.

"Your handkerchief was found in this office, apparently having been dropped by the persons who blew the safe," and the long slender fingers of The Thinking Machine were placed tip to tip as he talked. "It was not there the night before. The janitor who swept says so; Dunston, who happened to look, says so; Miss Clarke and Dunston both say they saw you with a handkerchief as you left the bank. Therefore, that handkerchief did reach that spot after you left the spot and before that robbery was discovered."

The cashier nodded.

"You say you don't use perfume; that no one in your family uses it. If Mr. Hatch verifies this, it would seem to exonerate you. But some person who handled that handkerchief after it left your possession and before it appeared here did use perfume.

"What person using perfume handled that handkerchief? Who? Who would have had an opportunity? We may safely dismiss the possibility that you lost the handkerchief, that it fell into the hands of burglars, that those burglars used perfume, that they brought it to your bank—your own bank, mind you!—and left it. The series of coincidences necessary to bring that about would not have occurred once in ten million times."

The Thinking Machine sat silent for several minutes squinting steadily at the ceiling.

Suspects Employe

"What person using perfume would have had an opportunity to handle that handkerchief? If it had been lost anywhere, in the laundry say, the same rule of coincidence I have just applied would eliminate it from the case. Therefore, because of an opportunity to get that handkerchief, we will assume there is—there must be—someone employed in this bank who had some connection with or actually participated in the burglary."

The Thinking Machine spoke with perfect quiet, but the effect was electrical. The aged president staggered to his feet and stood staring at him dully; again the flush of crimson came into the face of the cashier.

"Someone," The Thinking Machine went on evenly, "who either found the handkerchief and unwittingly lost it at the time of the burglary; or else stole it and deliberately used it as a possible manner of revenge on Mr. West.

"As I said, Mr. West himself seems eliminated by the perfume. Had he been one of the robbers he would not wittingly have left his own handkerchief; we will still assume that he does not use perfume, therefore did not drop the handkerchief by accident."

"Impossible! I can't believe it, and of my employes"—began Mr. Fraser.

"Please don't keep saying things are impossible," snapped The Thinking Machine. "It irritates me exceedingly. It all comes to the one vital question: Who in the bank uses perfume?"

"I don't know," said the two officials.

"I do," said The Thinking Machine. "There are two—only two, Dunston, your receiving teller, and Miss Clarke."

"But they——"

"Dunston uses a violet perfume not like that on the handkerchief, but identical with it," The Thinking Machine went on. "Miss Clarke uses a strong rose perfume."

"But those two persons, above all others in the bank, I trust implicitly," said Mr. Fraser, earnestly. "And, besides, they wouldn't know how to blow a safe. The police tell me this was the work of experts."

"Have you, Mr. Fraser, attempted to raise, or have you raised lately any large sum of money?" asked the scientist suddenly.

"Well, yes," said the banker. "I have. For a week past I have tried to raise $90,000 on my personal account."

"And you, Mr. West?"

The face of the cashier flushed slightly—it might have been at the tone of the question—and there was the least pause.

"No," he answered finally. "I have had no occasion to do so."

"Very well," and the scientist arose, rubbing his hands, "now we'll search the employes of the bank."

"What?" exclaimed both men. Then Mr. Fraser added: "That would be the height of absurdity; it would never do. Besides, any person who robbed the bank would not carry proofs of the robery, or even any of the money about with them—to the bank, above all places."

"The bank would be the safest place for it," snapped The Thinking Machine. "It is perfectly possible that a thief who might be in your employ would carry some of the money; indeed, it is doubtful if they would dare to do anything else with it. They could see you would have no possible idea of suspecting any one here—unless it is Mr. West."

There was a pause. "I'll do the searching, except the three ladies, of course," he added blushingly. "With them each combination of two can search the other one."

The Search Begins

Mr. Fraser and Mr. West conversed in low tones for several minutes.

"If the employes will consent I am willing," Mr. Fraser explained at last, "although I see no use of it."

"They will agree," said The Thinking Machine. "Please call them all into this office."

Among some confusion and wonderment the three women and fourteen men of the bank were gathered in the cashier's office, the outer doors being locked. The Thinking Machine addressed them with characteristic terseness.

"In the investigation of the burglary of last night," he explained, "it has been deemed necessary to search all employes of this bank." A murmur of surprise ran around the room. "Those who are innocent will agree readily, of course; will all agree?"

There were whispered consultations on all sides. Dunston flushed angrily; Miss Clarke, standing near Mr. Fraser, paled slightly. Dunston looked at her and then spoke.

"And the ladies?" he asked.

"They, too," explained the scientist. "They may search each other—in the other room, of course."

"I for one will not submit to such a proceeding," Dunston declared bluntly, "not because I fear it, but because it is an insult to my integrity."

Simultaneously it impressed itself on the bank officials and The Thinking Machine that the one person in the bank who used a perfume identical with that on the handkerchief was the first to refuse to submit to a search. The cashier and president exchanged startled glances.

"Nor will I," came in the voice of a woman.

The Thinking Machine turned and glanced at her. It was Miss Willis, one of the outside stenographers; Miss Clarke and the other woman were pale, but neither had spoken.

"And the others?" asked The Thinking Machine.

Generally there was acquiescence and as the men came forward the scientist searched them, perfunctorily it seemed. Nothing! At last there remained three men, these being Dunston, West and Fraser.

Then Dunston came forward, compelled to do so by the attitude of the other men. The three women stood together with white faces. The Thinking Machine spoke to them as his slender fingers searched the pockets of Dunston.

"If the ladies will retire to the next room they may proceed with their search," he suggested. "If any money is found bring it to me—nothing else."

"I will not, I will not, I will not," screamed Miss Willis, suddenly. "It's an outrage."

Miss Clarke, deathly white and half fainting, threw up her hands and sank without a sound into the arms of President Fraser. There she burst into tears.

An Outrage

"It is an outrage," she sobbed. She clung to President Fraser, her arms flung upward and her head resting on his breast. He was soothing her with fatherly words, and stroked her hair awkwardly. The Thinking Machine finished the search of Dunston. Nothing! Then Miss Clarke roused herself and dried her eyes.

"Of course I will have to agree to the search," she said, with a flash of anger in her pretty eyes. Miss Willis was weeping, but like Dunston she was compelled to yield, and the three women went into an adjoining room. There was a tense silence until they reappeared. Each shook her head. The Thinking Machine nearly looked disappointed.

"Well, well," he exclaimed. "Now, Mr. Fraser," and he started toward the president. Suddenly he stooped and picked up a scarf pin.

"This is yours," he said. "I saw it fall," and he made as if to search the aged man.

"Well, do you really think it necessary in my case?" he asked, in consternation as he drew back, nervously. "I—I am the president, you know."

"The others were searched in your presence, I will search you in their presence," said The Thinking Machine, tartly.

"But—but——," the president stammered.

"Are you afraid?" the other demanded.

"Why, of course not," he hurriedly answered, "but it seems so—so unusual."

"I think it best," said The Thinking Machine, and before the banker could draw away his slender fingers were in the inside breast pocket, whence they instantly drew out a bundle of money—one hundred $100 bills—ten thousand dollars—with the initials of the receiving teller, "P. D."—"o. k.—R. W."

"Great God!" exclaimed Mr. Fraser, ashen white.

"Dear me, dear me," said The Thinking Machine. He sniffed curiously at the bundle of bank notes, as a hound might sniff at a trail.

Winner of First Prize.

Each day I would read the story over carefully twice and would try to put myself in the writer's place; I attempted to find out the reason for each article desired by The Thinking Machine when he went into cell 13. Almost immediately after he asked for the bowl of water and to have his shoes shined, I concluded that he intended to write to some one.

Then the information obtained concerning the old and new plumbing and the rats in the cell gave me the idea of how the writing which the professor was going to do would be communicated to the outside world.

The fact of the close examination of the rats and the statement that they were dry, of course, convinced me that the drain pipe did not lead to the water, and as there must be some outlet, it must be in the playground, next door to the prison.

From this point, and through this drain pipe, I knew relief must come, and as Hutchinson Hatch, a reporter (and I suspect for the AMERICAN), was mentioned, nothing more natural than he should be the professor's outside assistant.

When acid and a No. 8 hat were called for through the drain pipe, which made the sound muffled, as The Thinking Machine did not want to be heard, I was not at all surprised that the man in cell No. 43 should be frightened, as it was he who had been accused of the murder by the use of acid.

There was no use for the acid except to burn away the bars of the cell and this I was quite positive the professor would do. But I was somewhat doubtful as to the manner of escape after he had gotten out of the cell. I made two guesses on this. Of course, I knew he would use the pliers to cut the electric light wire and I thought he would scale the wall by the use of the rope, aided by Hatch. But after thinking over this point, more than over any other, I came to the conclusion that by cutting off the electric light, the professor had a double purpose in mind and it was because of this I added the postscript to my answer. This did not really occur to me until I had finished writing my answer, but I believed it was correct.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 8, 1905.

THE SUCCESS OF MORAN MEANS MUCH TO BOSTON

His Wonderful Victory Proves That the Greatest Issue Throughout the Country is the Issue of Putting an End to GRAFT.

The BOSTON AMERICAN congratulates John B. Moran and the people of Boston on his election to the office of District Attorney of Suffolk County.

That one man, single-handed, opposed by a candidate who had the support of both great parties and the endorsement of the Bar Association, opposed by every newspaper in the city except one, should win, is the most amazing and sensational outcome of yesterday's election.

No one but Mr. Moran himself can claim credit for this wonderful vote.

His election teaches a lesson to citizens and politicians. It proves that the ONE GREAT ISSUE in which the people of this country are almost unanimous is the ISSUE OF GRAFT.

Mr. Moran made his campaign on this one issue. He showed up the corruption of office-holders. He did not fear to expose so-called respectable people. He promised nothing but a SQUARE DEAL. He only agreed to punish the big thieves as well as the little ones.

In the last speech of his campaign Mr. Moran referred to the fact that BUT ONE NEWSPAPER in the city of Boston reported his speeches. We are glad to say that that newspaper was the BOSTON AMERICAN.

The BOSTON AMERICAN takes no credit to itself for reporting these speeches. It did so as NEWS and as a plain matter of JUSTICE TO ITS READERS.

The other newspapers of Boston gave Mr. Moran insignificant notices, or no notice at all. They all dismissed him as a candidate, with a few words of contempt, or utterly ignored him.

The election of John B. Moran INAUGURATES A NEW ERA IN BOSTON.

It means that the people of the city are determined that corruption shall no longer flourish without at least an honest and vigorous effort to expose and punish it.

Mr. Moran has the opportunity to make an honorable and MEMORABLE RECORD.

He is universally recognized as HONEST and ABLE.

The BOSTON AMERICAN believes he will accept his opportunity. It believes Boston is to be congratulated even more than he on his election.

WHAT MORAN'S ELECTION MEANS

It means that the public was disgusted with the official whitewashing of the Dock Trust bribery scandal.

It means that the public understood and estimated at its true value the fact that when the City Administration wanted a real investigation of the Fenway steal, it was necessary to employ outside counsel to get at the truth.

It means that there are a whole lot of crooks in Boston who are trembling in their shoes because John B. Moran has been elected District Attorney.

Just a Moment of Your Valuable Time

And the AMERICAN Thanks You for Giving It

The BOSTON AMERICAN wants to take a moment of your time for your own good.

But we want to be honest with you and tell you that we also want to help ourselves at the same time.

Therefore you will do well to enter a limited partnership with this paper.

We want you to look into the merits of the AMERICAN'S Barter and Exchange columns. For a few cents you can exchange any article that is not useful to you for something that is useful that some one else has.

The AMERICAN wants to make the Barter and Exchange columns a clearing department for all its readers.

Thrift is the thing to cultivate and waste is the thing to beware of. Hence these lines.

Little Editorials from the People

CROWDS ON ELEVATED

EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have been interested lately in watching the crowds on the Elevated stations during the time when the trains have been delayed by reason of accidents. It occurs to me that, some day, there will be a panic on those narrow platforms at stations like Thompson square.

On one occasion recently the passengers in two crowded four-car trains were obliged to leave the trains at this station because something had happened to the mechanism in one of the trains. These passengers were crushed together on one side of that platform until there was momentary fear of a panic, or that many would be forced over the edge. During this time, the other side of the iron railing was almost vacant.

Now, are those railings necessary on these station platforms? Would it not be wiser for the company to remove them, and, if necessary, stand the few cents' loss which might ensue by someone's "repeating" a ride, rather than run the risk of many persons being injured, in some crush of people that will surely come sooner or later?

Another thing, would it be much additional expense for the company to put up a slight fence on the outside of the rails at such stations as City square, Northampton street, etc.? The officials of the company evidently have no conception of the feeling of dizziness and fear which comes over thousands of people as they are forced to stand on these high platforms and look down into the street, with nothing to cut off their view?

It seems to many that they will pitch over head first. This has a bad effect on many ladies and children, and contributes largely to their dread of riding on the Elevated. The expenditure of a few dollars will avoid expensive accidents and make many friends. W. L. E.

Somerville.

A FOOTPATH IN THE MIDDLESEX FELLS

EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN:

Why is it that by far the greater portion of Boston's superb park system is laid out for carriages or autos to the utter disregard of the wants or likes of pedestrians? I love long walks. I take a weekly jaunt of some ten or twelve miles across country each Sunday, accompanied by my wife.

Let me warn pedestrians against planning a trip afoot through the beautiful Middlesex Fells. There no provision—absolutely none—is made for the multitude who walk either from choice or necessity. The stroller is forced to travel afoot through clouds of dust kicked up by an incessant procession of autos and carriages.

Why not put a line of foot-paths through the Fells and around Spot Pond? No finer opportunity was ever presented for a delightful foot-path than along the side hill to the left of the highway as one goes from Medford square.

Why not give the common people a show, Messrs. Metropolitan Park Commissioners? Why not put in some foot-paths in the Middlesex Fells.

The Fenway

By Morton Birge

This is the Boston Fenway.

This is the morass dank and wet out in the Boston Fenway.

This is the contract the city let—figuring eight hundred thousand net, to clean up the morass dank and wet out in the Boston Fenway.

This is the gent with the heart of jet, in frenzied financing a perfect vet., who took up the contract the city let—figuring eight hundred thousand net, to clean up the morass dank and wet out in the Boston Fenway.

This is the million of graft that met the eyes of the "Goo-Goo" man, who set to look up the gent with the heart of jet, in frenzied financing a perfect vet., who took up the contract the city let—figuring eight hundred thousand net, to clean up the morass dank and wet out in the Boston Fenway.

This is the wily political pet who reckoned that he was about to get a part of the million of graft that met the eyes of the "Goo-Goo" man who set to look up the gent with the heart of jet, in frenzied financing a perfect vet., who took up the contract the city let—figuring eight hundred thousand net, to clean up the morass dank and wet out in the Boston Fenway.

This is the growing city debt which causes the citizens worry and fret except the wily political pet who reckoned that he was about to get a part of the million of graft that met the eyes of the "Goo-Goo" man who set to look up the gent with the heart of jet, in frenzied financing a perfect vet., who took up the contract the city let—figuring eight hundred thousand net, to clean up the morass dank and wet out in the Boston Fenway.

This is more trouble coming yet—for the matter will not be dropped, you bet, on account of the growing city debt, which causes the citizens worry and fret, except the wily political pet, who reckoned that he was going to get a part of the million of graft that met the eyes of the "Goo-Goo" man, who set to look up the gent with the heart of jet, in frenzied financing a perfect vet., who took up the contract the city let—figuring eight hundred thousand net, to clean up the morass dank and wet, out in the Boston Fenway.

CONVERSATION

A short essay by the great Turgeniel, graphically impressing upon us the littleness of humanity in the eyes of time

A HUMAN foot has never yet ascended the Jungfrau nor the Finsteraarhorn.

The summit of the Alps—a perfect chain of steep rocks—the depths of the heart of the mountains.

Above the mountains a pale-green heaven, still and clear. Hard, severe frost; firm, glittering snow; from under the snow protrude gloomy ice-incrusted, weatherbeaten twigs.

Two colossi, two giants, rise on either side of the horizon; the Jungfrau and the Finsteraarhorn. And the Jungfrau asks her neighbor: "What is the news? Thou canst gaze around more easily than I; what is happening there below?"

A thousand years elapse—a minute. And Finsteraarhorn thunders in reply: "Impenetrable clouds veil the earth—wait!"

Another thousand years elapse—a minute.

"What now?" asks the Jungfrau.

"Now I can see; there below everything is unchanged, confused and small. Blue water, black forests, masses of gray, piled-up, towering stone. And all around those little beetles still swarm, you know them, those with two legs, who, hitherto, have never been able to sully my summit nor thine."

"Mankind?"

"Yes, mankind."

A thousand years elapse once more—a minute.

"And what now?" asks the Jungfrau.

"It appears to me as if a few of these beetles had become invisible," thunders Finsteraarhorn; "it has grown clearer there below; the waters are diminished, the forests less dense!"

And yet another thousand years go by—a minute.

"What seest thou now?" asks the Jungfrau.

"Around us, close at hand, it seems to grow clearer," replies Finsteraarhorn; "but there, in the distance, there are still specks in the valleys, something still stirs there."

"And now?" asks the Jungfrau, after another thousand years—a minute.

"Now it is good," answers the Finsteraarhorn; "it is pure everywhere; perfectly white wherever one looks. Our snow is everywhere, spotless snow and ice. All is frozen. Now it is good and quiet."

"Yes, now it is good!" assents the Jungfrau. "And now, thou hast chattered sufficiently, old one. Let us now sleep a little."

"Yes, it is time."

So they sleep, those giant mountains, and the clear, green heaven slumbers above the everlasting silent earth.

Like our shadows,
Our wishes lengthen as our sun declines.

EDWARD YOUNG.
